

Bombing turns clock backward

By SPENCER DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — By resuming the intensified bombing of North Vietnam, President Nixon has turned back the diplomatic clock by eight months.

The White House said Monday the Vietnam peace talks are "still wide open." But it was also made clear that bombing will continue north of the 20th parallel of North Vietnam "until such time as a settlement is arrived at."

Last May 8, Nixon announced that North Vietnamese ports would be mined and rail and communication lines leading from China would be heavily bombed.

As the secret peace talks between presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho seemed to make some progress, Nixon ordered the bombing cut back below the 20th parallel, still in North Vietnam, but close to the border with South Vietnam.

The effect of Monday's announcement then is to move the U.S. position back to May when Nixon said the talks in Paris had drawn from the North Vietnamese only "bombastic rhetoric and a replaying of their demand for surrender."

Then, as now, the public defense of the bombing was presented as a means of saving the lives of U.S. pilots and other Americans still in Vietnam.

A news analysis

House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Monday, "We will not let peace talks be used as a cover for another Communist offensive."

Nevertheless, diplomatic sources do not believe that the U.S. talks with Hanoi are completely washed out or broken down beyond repair. They use the term suspension rather than breakdown.

But it appears clear that the same issue which has always dogged the peace talks has again blocked efforts to agree on a way to end the fighting: the political future of South Vietnam.

In the agreement that Kissinger and Tho were preparing, for example, the future role of the demilitarized zone at the 17th parallel, the future of North Vietnamese troops in the South, the infiltration of the South, the sovereignty of the Saigon government below the 17th parallel and the diplomatic standing of South Vietnam in the world were all issues.

According to the South Vietnamese, these issues might have been papered over, but it would not have resulted in a real or lasting solution to the Indochina conflict.

Sen. George McGovern hit upon the political issue in criticizing the bombing renewal as evidence the administration "is chained to a government in South Vietnam that is determined to sabotage any chance for peace."

McGovern, the defeated Democratic presidential candidate, said the bombing could only make the North Vietnamese more determined to keep fighting.

Some diplomatic sources took issue with increased military pressure which first drove the North Vietnamese to relax their demands somewhat in the talks with Kissinger.

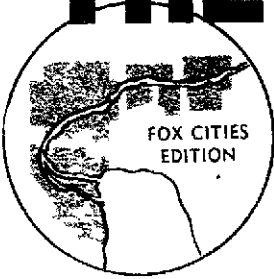

Both McGovern and the National League of Families of Prisoners of War said Kissinger and Nixon had raised false hopes for saying "peace is at hand," a remark Kissinger made Oct. 26 when a cease-fire agreement seemed near.

Noting hopes had been raised that some prisoners would be home by Christmas, the League said, "It is a bitter prospect and the disappointments and frustrations are severe."

Word of the impasse was being earned to Indochina by Kissinger's top assistant Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. who arrived in Saigon Tuesday.

After briefing South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, Haig was scheduled to travel to Cambodia, Laos and Thailand for meetings with leaders in those countries.

U.S. B52s lost during bomb raids

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. planes made the heaviest attack to date on the Hanoi-Haiphong area during the night, but it also was costliest to the United States.

The U.S. Command reported two B52 heavy bombers and an F111 fighter-bomber lost and eight American fliers missing. Hanoi said six of the missing men—the crew of one of the B52s—were captured and presented at a news conference in the North Vietnamese capital a few hours later.

Seven other American airmen were rescued in Thailand, the U.S. Command said.

North Vietnam charged that nearly 100 civilians were killed or wounded in attacks on Hanoi and its suburbs. But it said President Nixon's attempt to bomb it into submission would not force it to accept his peace terms.

Hanoi claimed that three B52s and three fighter bombers were shot down and a number of the fliers were captured. The U.S. Command said it had no additional losses to report for the time being, leaving open the possibility that other American planes may have been lost but the search for the crewmen is still under way.

It was the heaviest one day loss in men and material that the United States has suffered in the air war. The two B52s and the F111 cost a total of $31 million.

A total of 14 B52s now have been lost during the 7½ years America's biggest bombers have been flying in the Vietnam war, but only one of them previously was downed by enemy fire, on Nov. 23.

Although the U.S. Command withheld most information about the resumption of the air war north of the 20th parallel, one senior American official said hundreds of planes took part in the raids and some targets in the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial complex were hit for the first time in the war.

There were indications that more than 100 B52s, or most of those available, were used. For the first time in memory, the U.S. Command today gave no information on B52 strikes in South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. A spokesman refused to say whether this meant the entire force had been shifted to the attack on North Vietnam.

The U.S. Command also reported less than 200 U.S. fighter bomber strikes in South Vietnam Monday, about half as many as usually are flown. This indicated a major diversion of the smaller aircraft also to the attack in the North.

Authoritative sources reported a fifth aircraft carrier was operating in the Tonkin Gulf, in addition to the four normally there. This increased the fighter-bomber force further.

Military sources said President Nixon had ordered the shutdown on official information about the attacks.

"We never have been under such tight restrictions," said one experienced officer in the U.S. Command.

The Command did announce that U.S. Navy ships had resumed surface gunfire attacks north of the 20th parallel but gave no details.

Lips, pig snouts may be banned in wieners

WASHINGTON (AP)—New federal meat standards will be proposed soon which will ban from hot dogs such things as beef lips, pork snouts, hearts and tongues, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Those items, plus others such as spleens, tripe and pig stomachs, are allowed to be ground up and used in frankfurters, bologna and other cooked sausages.

But Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng said "it's time to consider taking meat by-products out of frankfurters," although the snouts, lips and other items are considered nutritious and wholesome.

Federal rules do not allow animal eyeballs, ears and lungs in hot dogs, a spokesman added.

Not all hot dogs use the byproducts and those which do must list the items on package labels.

Officials said the tighter meat regulation will be proposed soon and that it will be open to comment from the meat industry and the public for 60 days before final action is taken.

Meanwhile, a legal furor in Michigan over animal by-products in hot dogs has been carried to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Michigan state rules prohibit animal by-products in hot dogs which currently are allowed by the federal government.

Splashdown puts end to lunar exploration

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—The last Apollo came home today, ending with a splash in the South Pacific seas the program which put 20th century man on the moon.

American astronauts Eugene A. Cernan, Harrison H. Schmitt and Ronald E. Evans returned to earth at 2:24 p.m. EST after completing the last, longest and most scientifically-productive of Apollo lunar explorations.

Helicopters from the recovery carrier Ticonderoga quickly hovered over the Apollo 17 craft and Navy frogmen leaped into the water to assist the astronauts into a life raft. The seas 400 miles southeast of Samoa were gentle; the weather perfect.

The spacemen were to be plucked from the raft and taken to a red-carpet, brass-hat welcome on the Ticonderoga.

Apollo 17 is the final flight in a $25 billion program created to boost American prestige and carried out as a scientific exploration for all men. The program ends three years, five months after first putting 20th century man on the moon.

Aboard the command ship America, of the last moon mission is a record cargo of moon samples, more than 3,000 pictures taken on the moon and about two miles of film taken from moon orbit. Also on board are samples of an orange dust which scientists say may revolutionize thinking about lunar evolution.

Helicopters aboard the carrier were prepared to hover over the Apollo 17 command ship, America, after it blazes through the atmosphere and then floats to a splashdown under three huge parachutes. The spacemen were to be plucked from a life raft and taken to the ship for a red-carpet, brass-hat welcome.

Mission Control told the spacemen that a small rocket firing would be needed at 10:11 a.m. to more perfectly aim the spacecraft at its planned splashdown point.

The astronauts awoke from their last night in space to the music "Anchors Aweigh" and the "Star Spangled Banner." Mission Control played the music twice and the crew of America stirred awake at 7:03 a.m. 10 minutes behind schedule.

"Hey, Houston," said Evans, a Navy commander and a veteran of shipboard wakeup calls. "That's mighty fine."

"We are ready to have you come home today," said Mission Control.

"We're all set, too," said Evans. "We've been waiting a long time for Anchors Aweigh"—and we missed it.

Cernan, the mission commander, later looked out a spacecraft window at earth and said, "We're looking at your big smiling crescent. How far out are we?"

"You're just passing the 40,000 mile mark," he was told.

"Forty thousand miles," repeated Cernan, with wonder. "Okay."

On their last night in space, the crewmen held a televised news conference, answering 13 questions relayed from reporters by Mission Control. During the program, geologist Schmitt said that while on the moon he and Cernan sampled "a broad spectrum of lunar history" and increased the perspective for the future of mankind in the solar system.

Truman is more alert

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Former president Harry S. Truman remained in very serious condition today, but a hospital spokesman said he seemed more alert after spending a restful night.

John Dreves, hospital spokesman, said Truman "follows peoples' movement with his eyes, but has not spoken to them."

Kidney output had increased during the past 24 hours but remained inadequate, Dreves said.

War has done little to change Vietnam

BY WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Looking at the Vietnam situation before an expected ceasefire, an American might well conclude: "In some ways this is just about where the United States came in, where it all began years ago."

As for the South Vietnamese, they face the melancholy possibility that they are in for a replay of some of what happened to them in the early stages of their fratricidal conflict.

The ironies are many and perplexing, seeming to mock the participants after 12 years of war, a casualty list of killed and maimed in the millions, a U.S. investment approaching $200 billion, widespread ruin in Indochina and 4½ frustrating years of Paris talks.

The Saigon regime today controls most of South Vietnam's population, but in terms of geography there is not too much difference between today's map of who holds what and that of 1954. Much of the territory must be marked as contested, but dug-in Communists control many of the same areas the Vietminh held when the French were being driven out 18 years ago.

When France was being humiliated, a map showed the Vietminh of Communist Ho Chi Minh controlling—apart from practically all Tonkin in the north

—most of Annam's rural areas from Quang Tri Province down into the central areas, splashes of territory along the Cambodian border, large areas of Cochinchina in the extreme south and much of northern Laos.

Today's map would show North Vietnamese and Viet Cong controlling a big area of Quang Tri, splashes of territory in the center where much real estate remains contested, and areas along the Cambodian border along with part of Cambodia and much of northern Laos.

In 1954 the Vietminh controlled much of the South outside town and city population centers. What it didn't hold was under the sway of armed religious sects. Today, Communist-held areas are sparsely populated, containing perhaps 10 per cent of the people.

Intelligence sources suggest that the North Vietnamese plan to leave thousands of their troops in the South to merge with the Viet Cong. This recalls a situation that existed in 1954 after the Geneva settlement that divided Vietnam. Hanoi ordered 100,000 Vietminh into the North, but left a tough hard core of 5,000 south of the 17th parallel to merge with the peasants and bide their time preparing for the next phase of "liberation."

Hanoi then needed time to build a new regime under the Laodong party, to weed out potential enemies. This time Hanoi must recover from losses in 12 years of war against Southern and U.S. forces from the effects of seven years of bombing and all the rest.

It was January 1961 before the guerrillas mounted their major drive in the South last time. They moved immediately after a Hanoi announcement proclaimed the existence of a National Liberation Front.

This time if the front should choose to launch a new campaign of attrition

Crime fighting fund decision postponed

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Adoption of a Wisconsin plan for distributing federal crimefighting funds has been postponed until January in the face of complaints from law-enforcement officials.

Debate over the 1973 proposal for distributing an anticipated $11.5 million dominated a hearing Monday, during which the state Council on Criminal Justice voted to table the matter until Jan. 4.

Members of the panel said they need time to review amendments suggested by state agencies and local law-enforcement departments.

The state's blueprint for using the funds has to be filed with the government by Jan. 15.

Spokesmen for municipal police departments complained the plan prepared by a council staff does not provide large communities with a proportionate share of the allocation.

The plan was criticized originally by a spokesman for Atty. Gen. Robert W. Warren, whose office requested $500,000 for a crime information bureau.

Several persons at Monday's hearing said the council had not received adequate data from regional councils before deciding how to distribute the funds.

The 1973 appropriation would be the largest allocation to Wisconsin under the five-year-old Safe Streets Act.

Racine Mayor Kenneth Huck said there have been too many programs "where the money never gets to the people it was intended to help."

"For far too long," Huck said, "the cities have been sitting back on their hands. The City of Racine is not willing to play that role any longer."

"Do you have sufficient information to make policy at this time?" Huck asked Walter Kelly, the council's executive director. "We don't think you do."

The plan was submitted to the council Dec. 4.

Beloit's police chief, Roger Helser said there was "too much exclusionary verbiage" in the plan, and that Beloit might lose funds as a result.

Helser said Beloit might not get funds for a cadet police training program if such money is restricted to "cities of 50,000 or more" and to cities with "75 or more policemen."

The Wisconsin Alliance of Cities said a survey of 16 cities in the alliance showed the 1973 proposal was "not sufficient to take care of the needs of these large cities."

Dispute over the plan has been smoldering for weeks, beginning with the state Justice Department's request for an additional $500,000 to pay for its crime information bureau.

The council's proposal eliminated the bureau from the list of funds recipients.

Daniel Hanley, Warren's executive assistant, said it would be a "terrible tragedy" if the bureau had to be discontinued.

The bureau compiles law enforcement statistics, processes fingerprints for local law enforcement agencies and operates a teletype network which connects 50 police forces with computers in Madison.

Included in the $11.5 million proposal is an expansion of the teletype network to include 155 police agencies.

Concerning grievances submitted by municipalities, Kelley said he feels 70 per cent of the requests can be adopted in the plan without distorting the council's blueprint.

The other 30 per cent, he suggested, might require policy decisions by the council.

News media called lax on pushing open meeting law

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The president of the Wisconsin Association of School Boards says that the news media of Wisconsin are sometimes lax in their devotion to upholding the state law that requires meetings of public bodies to be open to the public except for explicit purposes named in law.

Allan J. Dale discussed what he said was the inattention of the media in a recent dispute about closing to the public wage negotiations between a school board and a teachers' union.

He said a school board ordered that the bargaining sessions be conducted at open meetings, but that the union members filed a prohibited-practices complaint with the state labor board and "there was no great rush by the state news media to defend or support that school board in its efforts to pursue open meetings."

Mobile home tax boost advised

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Taxes on mobile home owners should be raised because they have not been paying their fair share of community costs, a legislative council committee was told Monday.

Ed Johnson of Madison, executive secretary of the Wisconsin League of Municipalities, said homeowners now shoulder a larger share of community expenses because of the present taxing procedures on mobile homes.

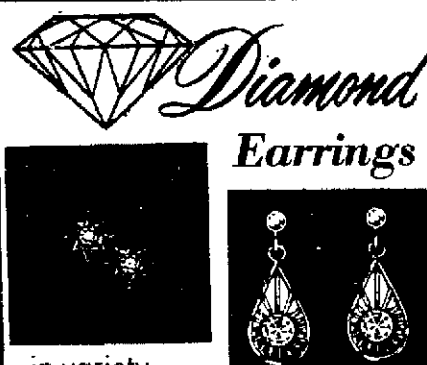

Under the law, communities levy a monthly fee on occupied mobile homes on the basis of "the fair market value of the mobile home, reduced by tax-exempt household furnishings."

H.E. Halverson of the Mobile Home Association objected to Johnson's proposal for a minimum tax on mobile homes, saying it would be "discriminatory" and make mobile home owners "second class citizens."

"The only community in the state whose residents pay for 100 per cent of the cost of services that I know of is Elm Grove," Halverson said. "That is not the basis for our present tax structure."

The legislative council committee was appointed last summer to study the mobile home tax question at the request of the Wisconsin Towns Association.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the second article of a five-part Christmas series about Joseph, the head of Jesus' family, the man who protected and guided him into maturity.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"No room." Another door closed, and another and another. "No room." From house to house, Joseph moved along the clamorous streets of Bethlehem, an urgent entreaty on his lips, a gnawing desperation inside him. "No room."

He glanced up anxiously at Mary, seated sideways on the flat burro saddle. She was bent slightly forward, her lips tight, one arm clutching her body, the other hand tightly gripping a swatch of the burro's mane. But then the strained expression passed and she smiled.

Disconcerted, Joseph said to her, "Mary, how happens it that I sometimes see sorrow and sometimes joy in thy countenance?"

She rubbed a hand across her perspiring brow and covered her eyes, murmuring, "I see two people with my eyes, the one weeping and mourning and the other laughing and rejoicing." She may have been feverish, with childbirth at hand and after the hard journey.

The worried exchange is recorded in the ancient noncanonical "Protevangelion" or "Book of James," who is identified as a kinsman of Jesus and first bishop of Jerusalem. In it, the couple's difficult plight corresponds to the scriptural account.

Joseph knew they could delay no longer. "Help, Lord ... Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel!" He looked desperately up and down the crowded street, jostling even after dark with soldiers, travelers, winepeddlers and jugglers.

At the inn, which also had been without room, he had been told of a cave on a back road the edge of town where animals were stabled. He grasped the lead rope and started out, keeping an apprehensive eye on his distressed wife.

They had gone a short way when she uttered a small cry and gasped, "Take me down. Take me down for that which is within me presses to come forth."

He lunged back beside her and lifted her down, laying her gently on the hard ground. His hands felt the heaving within her and he trembled. He started to draw out a blanket for her but then, suddenly aware of the oncoming night chill and the predicament that was upon them, he jammed it back into the carrying sack.

He knelt down and picked her up in his arms. With the sack slung from a shoulder, the lead rope tucked around an elbow and carrying Mary before him, he trudged down the rocky road until he found the cave.

Within its dark, windless fastness, the heat of the animals added to the warmth. He brushed a place clear of refuse, shaped a mattress of straw and placed a blanket on it, covering her with another. He ran back to the town, imploring the innkeeper to send a midwife. He fetched flame for his skinsheathed lantern and ran back to the cave where he built a fire at the entrance.

It was the second watch of night. The swift cold of desert darkness had descended, but the roof of the heavens hung with glittering stars.

Joseph, the work-toughened carpenter of Nazareth and devoutly observant Jew, had come to Bethlehem, the city of his ancestry, to register in a census ordered by the Roman empire's legate in Syria, Quirinius.

Although not required to bring his new bride, he had done so despite her approaching delivery of a child. Ancient writings imply this was partly because of demeaning gossip in Nazareth about her pregnancy. Other than she, only Joseph recognized its divine origins.

On him lay the burden of shielding that secret. He would not part with Mary, leaving her alone at the mercy of wagging tongues. He had received her as his wife and he would guard her dearly, and also the fragile life within her.

Moreover, gusts of rebellion against the tax decree had flared in Galilee, a rustic, hotblooded region of recurrent insurrection against the oppressive domination by the pagan Roman conquerors. Guerrilla raiders struck at Roman arsenals and patrols, unleashing ruthless reprisals.

To the conscientious Joseph, it would have been unsafe to have left his family behind even though the three-day journey of 720 stadia (about 85 miles) had been a gruelling ordeal for Mary.

He could have foregone the trip altogether if he had been willing to follow

Roman preferences by enrolling to be taxed at his city of residence. But Joseph, like other staunch Jews, had stuck firmly to their deep tradition of the land, to the geography of tribal roots.

His "bet abot," the house of his fathers, was Bethlehem, the city of the shepherd-king, David. Joseph belonged to that Davidic line, entrusted with the messianic hope, yet without special social status or privilege. Many Jews of that olden royal line were poor laborers, as was Joseph.

Tradition also ascribes that ancestry to Mary, although the scriptural genealogies, recorded in the gospels of Matthew and Luke, gave only the Davidic descent of Joseph, legally the father of Jesus, the male line by which Judaism traced a person's stock.

In the entrance of the cave, Joseph heated a pot of water, occasionally slipping over to kneel beside Mary. Her writhing moments of stress each time gave way to a tide of utter calm. Then the panting exertions would begin anew. He gripped her hand, stroking her wet brow, and once more she grew relaxed.

She lay there quietly in the wavering red glow of the lantern and smiling weakly, told him to leave her for a short while. He hesitated, straightened the cover, and moved back to the entrance, scanning the dark road in prayerful supplication the midwife soon would appear. But there was no sign of her.

The water already steamed and he shifted the pot to one side. As he squatted there on his haunches, a strange sensation came over him. Suddenly, the world seemed halted in its course. Nothing moved. No air stirred. No insects hummed. The fire stood motionless. His own body and breathing seemed transfixed. A total hush gripped the universe.

Then he heard a child whimper and Mary's faint call, "Joseph!"

He was beside her and a great flowing warmth filled that cavern, an enveloping surge of tenderness, a joyous luminescence, and sweet music brushed his ears. She was looking up at him, tears in her eyes, but smiling, too. He saw the baby boy and began crying, too, and laughing.

"Blessed Mary," he said, "Blessed be the Lord."

He brought the pot of warm water and Black film consciousness

BY DAVID F. WAGNER
Post-Crescent Arts Editor

With growing black consciousness in the arts, it is logical that movies with black stars, black points of view and black directors increase in number and, hopefully, quality.

Melvin Van Peebles has done a few, most recently "Sweet Sweetback's Baadass Song." By far the most popular have been the two "Shaft" flicks, directed by Gordon Parks Sr. Young blacks around the nation identified to the hilt with John Shaft, a superspade cop who wasn't owned by the hunkie pigs at headquarters. "Shaft" films were, at best, fantasy trips which were, frankly, bad entertainment.

Finally, an almost 100 per cent black project (only the producer is white) has resulted in realistic entertainment "Super Fly," which is playing only three days at the Marc 2 in Appleton, gets right down to street level, chronicling the cocaine dealing operations in New York City. From the standpoint of empathy, blacks are going to have a tougher time identifying with the star of "Super Fly," Ron O'Neal, who portrays a cocaine dealer who has a family of 50 dealers working the streets for him. The hero is a bad guy, where with "Shaft," Richard Roundtree was the perfect hero, superior, basically good and definitely black. O'Neal, who looks more white than black with his long, straight hair, is the embodiment of what many blacks hate — the pusher man. Plus, he's owned by the white man.

"Super Fly" is far from a perfect film. Its visual side is cliché ridden, its dialogue is trite but realistic (blacks are forever calling each other "nigger") and many parts of the story are shallow and predictable. But the plot takes a clever twist at the end, which may vary from realism a bit but provides excellent entertainment.

Despite its flaws, "Super Fly" proves that Gordon Parks Jr., the director, has a lot more insight into the black scene today than his father does. Judging by "The Learning Tree" and "Shaft," the old man has his head in the clouds somewhere, while the kid is at least down on the streets.

Generally, O'Neal's acting is subtle, with understatement substituting for historicism and overdramatizing. Whether that's a tribute to his own skills or Parks' directing talent I can't say, but it gives "Super Fly" a touch of the real drug scene we rarely see today — whether the project be black or white.

My main regret is that "Super Fly," which is aided by some excellent Curtis Mayfield music, was only scheduled for three days. It deserves more

Weak but amusing

8:30-10 Channels 2-7 — The New CBS Tuesday Night Movies has a comedy adventure that is a bit weak in its motivations but still manages to be a cleverly-done, amusing enough way to pass 90 minutes. It's called "Your Money or Your Wife" Betsy von Fursenberg is the witchy star of a soap opera called Woman's Editor. Suddenly she announces she is marrying the sponsor and the show will be cancelled, which irritates and puts out of work Ted Bessell, who created and wrote the series, Jack Cassidy, who produced the series as well as loved the woman, and Elizabeth Ashley, the casting director. Bessell then writes a script, using the real characters, and develops a plot in which she is kidnapped. Cassidy talks him into making it a real-life drama and what follows has some laughs, some suspense. There's a clever twist worth watching.

7-7:30 Channels 2-7 — A black picket shows up in front of MAUDE's home and causes all the problems and some laughs. Seems Walter (Bill Macy) is part of a syndicate that has made some investments, and one of them is a real estate deal that has made him — and Maude, who signed a paper without paying attention — a slumlord.

7:30-9 Channels 11-9 — ABC Theatre begins its first of four original dramatic productions with "If You Give A Dance You Gotta Pay the Band." Written by Stanley L. Gray, a former drug addict, the play centers around the friendship of a young boy and girl in an eastern city ghetto.

9-10 Channel 5 — NBC Reports looks at the state of health care in the U.S. in a documentary entitled "What Price Health?" Seeking a wide variety of case histories, producer Lucy Jarvis, traveled throughout the country to find some of the most modern medical facilities in some places and no available medical care at all in others. Senator Edward Kennedy discusses the Health Security Act, a federal insurance plan, now in Senate. And Elliot Richardson, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare when this was prepared, discusses proposed legislation.

What to do, where to go

Marc 1 — Oh! Calcutta! at 7 and 9 p.m.

Marc 2 — Super Fly at 7:15 and 9:15 p.m.

New Zealand tries art over graffiti on walls

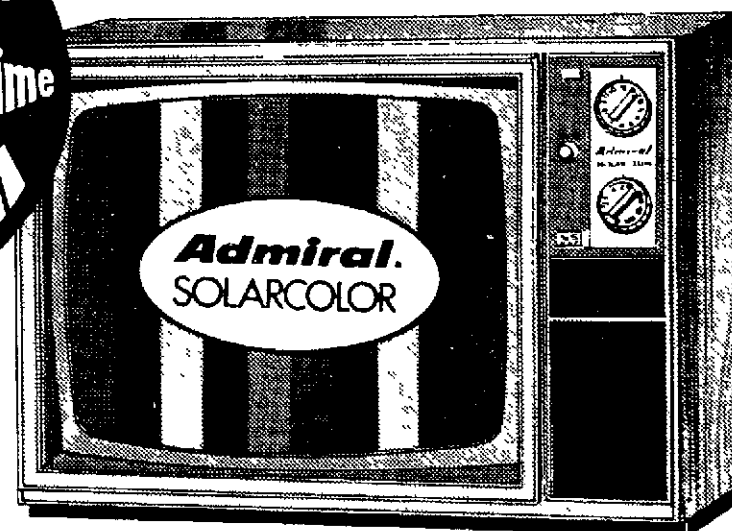

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (AP) — High school art students are cooperating with the New Zealand Railways Department in an experiment to clean up graffiti covered walls. Students at Porirua, near here, painted attractive pictures and designs over smutty pictures and poetry in a pedestrian subway. Rail commuters have praised the school art designs. The department says it will examine the walls after two months to see if the graffiti artists have been discouraged.

Citizens attest to popularity of state

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Almost two-thirds of Wisconsin residents interviewed in a statewide study believe the state is becoming a more desirable place to live relative to other states.

The survey directed by Jon Udell, who heads the Bureau of Business Research and Service in the University of Wisconsin—Madison Graduate School of Business, and financed by the Journal Co. of Milwaukee, was published Sunday.

Twenty per cent of the 290 persons who took part in telephone interviews felt the state was becoming less desirable, 12 per cent said they were "unable to ascertain any change for better or worse" and two per cent said Wisconsin's relative desirability was stable.

The state's four seasons and weather were listed as its major advantage by 54.1 per cent of the sampling, which was chosen randomly in each county based on the proportion of the state's population in the county.

But, after taxes which 34.5 per cent complained about, the highest ranked disadvantage was the cold and snowy winters at 32.4 per cent. Twenty-nine per cent listed no disadvantages.

"I don't think there is a better place to live where taxes might be lower," one of the respondents who felt Wisconsin was becoming more desirable said.

Udell said 50 per cent of those interviewed thought their community's economy would be better off five years from now. 18 per cent figured it would be about the same, 21 per cent expected deterioration and 12 per cent had no opinion.

"Persons who had lived in one other state since reaching adulthood are the most frequent believers that Wisconsin will become more desirable, relative to other states, as a place to live," the UW professor said.

"However, persons who have lived in two or more other states are less likely to believe that Wisconsin's relative desirability will rise in the next five years."

Seventy-two per cent of the respondents felt taxes were too high relative to the services provided, 23 per cent did not think so and five per cent declined to make an evaluation.

A decrease in real estate taxes was called for by 74 per cent who listed the taxes they would most like to see reduced, while 28 per cent wanted to see lower personal income taxes.

Welfare was listed by 26 per cent as the expenditure they most would like to see reduced, but 16 per cent said they did not care to see any reductions and eight per cent wanted less highway spending.

No increase in government expenditures was favored by 34.8 per cent, and 21 per cent gave no answer or said they did not know. But more educational expenditures were favored by 11 per cent, pollution control spending nine per cent and high construction and mass transit 8.2 per cent.

"Persons who have lived in other states are the most prone to believe that taxes are too high relative to the level of government services in Wisconsin," Udell said. "They are also the most frequent in recommending a reduction of personal and corporate income taxes."

"On the other hand, these persons are the most frequent in recommending larger government expenditures for medical care, education and crime control."

Charity Ball in season's spotlight

Exchanging greetings

Mr. and Mrs. William Buchanan and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Purdy pause on the dance floor to exchange greetings at the 40th annual Charity Ball.

One of the highlights of this year's Charity Ball sponsored by the Infant Welfare Circle of The King's Daughters was a huge birthday cake which was served after dinner in celebration of the ball's 40th birthday. Since 1929 these lovely events have helped provide funds for the continued support of the charitable works of the circle through the Infant Welfare Foundation of the King's Daughters of Appleton.

Saturday evening's gala held in the beautiful setting that is North Shore Golf Club, provided guests with dinner if they chose, dancing to excellent music and the opportunity for camaraderie with old and new friends.

The ailing house

New roof

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: I am going to have a new roof put on my house, which has had cedar shingles for the past 15 years. They have stood up well and I like their appearance. But I have been told that heavyweight asphalt shingles would be a better choice, from the standpoint of protection. How do you feel? — Highland Park, Ill.

A: I have to agree with your informant, especially with respect to those asphalt shingles which seal themselves to each other. All edges are solidly sealed down, so not even hurricane force winds can get underneath to loosen them. Nor can I forget that terrible fire in the Los Angeles suburbs in the early '60s, where hundreds of homes were razed. Most of the survivors were houses with fire-resistant asphalt shingle roofs. The houses with the wood shingles were the ones that went up. But if you're not expecting a fire or hurricane, the cedar shingles will give wonderful service.

Q: My wife decided to do the TV den with decorator burlap on the walls. I like the idea. I understand that the paste goes on the walls, not the burlap, which is different from wallpaper. But a question: How do I keep the edges from unraveling? — Buffalo.

A: Paint a one-inch stripe of fresh, white shellac on the underside of each edge. When dry, trim off half an inch, using a razor-blade utility knife. The longer and weightier straight-edge you can use, the better. The edges will stay clean.

Q: Is there any way to make a nice old hand-blown bottle into a lamp base without having to cut a hole in the glass? — Baltimore.

A: Yes indeed. Usually for less than $2 you can get a lamp conversion kit. It contains a special chain switch which fits on a cork-covered spindle. This, in turn, fits in the neck of the bottle, and the extension cord runs down the outside. Includes a holder for the lamp shade too, and an assortment of corks for various size bottlenecks. Takes perhaps two minutes for the conversion.

WASHINGTON — Only Diamond Jim Brady and other big spenders of the Nineties could enjoy the variety of food that today's average man expects for his holiday feasts.

In 1900 fewer than a hundred different foods were readily available to the public. A modern supermarket stocks 10 times as many.

In the gaslight era, people of moderate means ate mostly solid, filling foods — meats, poultry, fish, potatoes, bread, and starchy vegetables such as dry beans and peas, the National Geographic Society says.

Fresh fruit was expensive, and hardly anyone ate salads. Different growing seasons made it almost impossible to have both lettuce and tomatoes at the same time.

Stored in cellar
Other vegetables were limited to what was in season locally, except those that could be stored in a cold cellar — for instance cabbage, carrots, and onions.

Christmas dinner in the country usually offered more variety. In the Middle West, fresh pumpkin, apple, and mince pies were baked the night before. Crisp loaves of baking bread browned in the oven the next morning, followed by a plump goose or turkey.

A huge brown crock warmed by the stove was filled with beans and smoked pork from a hog that was butchered every November.

Guests with a sweet tooth ate raspberry, strawberry, and blackberry preserves. Sweet and sour pickles were made from watermelon rind canned the previous summer.

The revolution in American agriculture liberated the holiday season from the confines of the calendar. Instead of preserves, fresh strawberries, pineapples, and blueberries now can add zest to festive meals, and a host of frozen foods graces the table.

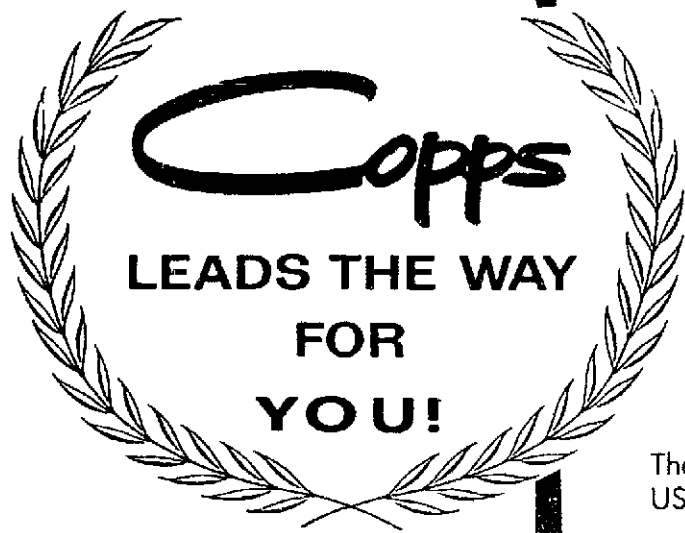

Frozen in Forties

Vegetables and fruits, unlike meats, posed a problem to early processors by deteriorating even when frozen. In the 1920s came the discovery that a brief dunking in hot water inactivates quality-damaging enzymes that defy subzero temperatures. Frozen foods, however, did not become commonplace until the 1940s.

Meats have become a food for all seasons, too. In the past 40 years, reports the Department of Agriculture, meat consumption has risen 45 pounds to 168 pounds per person annually. Beef accounts for almost the entire increase.

Chicken, once considered a Sunday and holiday treat, has become a week-day food.

Automated feeders, waterers, ventilators and other labor savers make it possible for one man to take care of 100,000 broilers at a time. The average producer handles about 20,000 The frozen foods, specially prepared meats and chickens, and gourmet fare available to modern housewives enable them to feed unexpected holiday visitors with an ease unheard of at the turn of the century. In answer to the question, "What on earth will we feed them?" the hostess who planned ahead can simply point to a well stocked freezer and larder.

Ann Landers

Substitute contrasting images

Dear Ann Landers: I feel sorry for anyone who is so inhibited that he can't urinate in the presence of others, but I'd gladly change troubles with the man who signed himself "Bashful Kidneys." My problem is just the opposite.

I'm a woman 33 and all my life I have suffered from "Suggestible Kidneys." Whenever I see a water fountain, a picture of a river or a lake or hear the sound of a dripping faucet, I have to head for the ladies room. It's gotten so bad that a joke about Niagara Falls is enough to set me off.

I've seen a urologist, a kidney specialist and a gynecologist. They all say nothing is physically wrong with me, that it's psychological and I'll just have to overcome it. But nobody tells me how. Any suggestions? — Comfort Station Connie

Dear Connie: It sounds as if the triggering mechanism is automatic which means you're going to have a hard time changing it.

Try substituting contrasting mental images — a desert scene, a camel, palm trees, a blistering sun, miles of sand, thirst — oops, better forget that one, it might suggest a drink of water. Well established behavioral patterns are difficult to alter, but it can be done with determination.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's a letter that will be different. It's for all those women whose husbands are out running around. They talk about the Other Woman. Well, I'm the Other Man. Not her lover, but his. Lex had been staying with me a few nights a week, telling his wife he had transportation problems. (He works in a city 60 miles from his home.)

I just found out that Lex is cheating on me and I feel a strange sympathy for his wife. I took your advice although when I wrote to you, I didn't let on that my sweetheart was a guy. I threw the bum out. I'm writing to say thank you and to share the two lessons I learned. First: A cheater is a cheater and he'll cheat on everybody. Second: Just because a husband isn't interested in other women doesn't mean he's faithful. — Recovering in Durham

Dear Re: Thank you for both lessons. Maybe there's a third lesson in there someplace. If your husband is cheating, girls, be thankful it's with a woman.

Dear Ann Landers: With regard to the question asked by "Stumped" as to the relationship of Jim and Tad after Fay and Pete were divorced, "Stumped" is wrong in the belief that they have a step-brother, Allen, in common. Jim and Allen are maternal half-brothers since they share the genes of a common mother, Fay. Tad and Allen are paternal half-brothers since they share the genes of a common father, Pete.

Therefore, Jim and Tad are not related genetically, irrespective of whether Pete and Fay are married. Of course, they are no longer step-brothers after Pete and Fay are divorced. — M. Grossman, assistant professor of Genetics, Urbana, Ill.

Dear M.G.: Thanks for unscrambling the eggs. Your letter reminds me of the comment made by another Fay, Miss Emerson, when she divorced Elliot Roosevelt. She said, "The saddest part of this divorce is that I am losing a wonderful mother-in-law."

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Mrs. Gordon Bubolz, left, and Mrs. James Miller admire a nativity centerpiece with Phyllis Brinkley, far right. Mrs. Brinkley spoke to members of the Appleton Woman's Club Thursday during a program at the First United Methodist Church. Her topic, "The Simple Beauty of Christmas," evolved around the true meaning of Christmas as presented in scripture, greeting, poetry, story, monologue and proclamation. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Hernandez-Meidam

SHIOCTON — Suzanne Hernandez and Robert C. Meidam exchanged wedding vows Saturday during a celebration at St. Denis Catholic Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Leonardo Hernandez, route 6, Appleton, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meidam, route 1, Bear Creek.

Maid of honor Yowanda Smith was accompanied by bridesmaids Mary Teran, Carmen Banta, Donna Meidam, Anita Hernandez and Barb Hernandez. Junior attendants were Lori Ann Smith and Amy Acedevdo.

Dan Meidam, Bear Creek, was best man. Completing the bridal party were Luis Hernandez, Ed Galor, Jim Christian, Lenard Hernandez, Willie Her-andez, Mike Meidam and Lyle Byer.

The former Miss Hernandez is a secretary at Shiocton High School. Her husband is with Georgia Pacific. They will reside in New London.

Kluba-Bartelt

ANCORAGE, Alaska — Barbara Lynn Kluba became the bride of Gene D. Bartelt recently during services at Fort Richardson military base.

Parents of the newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Kluba, 1183 Burnette St., Neenah, and Mr. and Mrs. Don Bartelt, 742 Higgins Ave., Neenah.

The couple will live in Anchorage where Mr. Bartelt is a private first class in the Army.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Krablean

Neenah couple wed 50 years

NEENAH — Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Krablean, 530 Fairview Ave., celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday afternoon at a reception for relatives and friends at St. Paul Lutheran Church.

Clarence Krablean and the former Mabel Neabling were married Dec. 23, 1922 at the First Presbyterian Church, Menominee, Mich.

Mr. Krablean worked at Neenah Paper Co. for over 47 years.

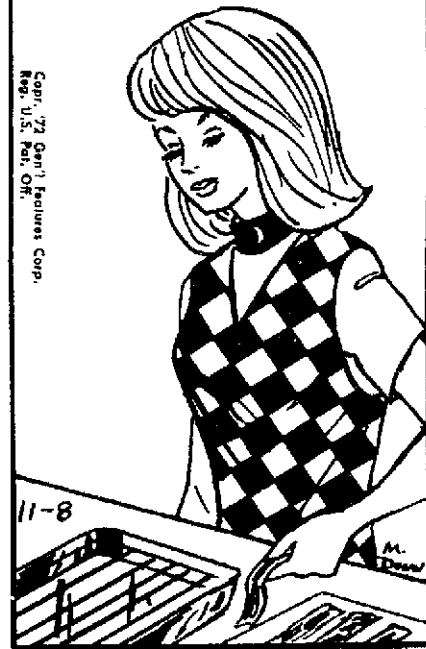

The couple has two children, Donald, Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Gerald Schneider, Plymouth. There are five grandchildren.

Basic techniques give the softest, cleanest diapers for babies

Babies live in diapers 'round the clock for most of their first two years and they deserve the softest, cleanest diapers possible. Laundering need not be a difficult or unpleasant task for mother if these simple routines — compliments of The Soap and Detergent Association — are followed.

Set up a diaper pail near baby's changing table or in the bathroom. The pail may be of any material, as long as it has a tight-fitting lid. Fill the pail with warm water to which soap or detergent, a water conditioner if necessary, and chlorine bleach (1 tablespoon per gallon) have been added. Place used diapers in the pail, after flushing those that are soiled in the toilet to remove loose particles. Replace the pail lid.

Wash diapers separately from other laundry. Start by putting diapers in washer. To remove excess water, advance timer to spin cycle, then launder the following way: For best cleaning results, add no more diapers than can move freely in the wash water. Use the regular cycle on the washer, hot water and soap or detergent. Also a chlorine bleach, which removes stains, disinfects and deodorizes, may be added — one cup per average wash load. If you live in an area where water is extremely hard, use a water conditioner in the wash and rinse cycles. Dry diapers in an automatic dryer or line-dry. Smooth, fold, and put away.

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

One attack of mono often brings immunity

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you discuss mono? I am aware that this attacks the teen-age group. My daughter first had it in college but has had recurring bouts in young adult years. Why does this return? And why is there no treatment to prevent it? I have not been aware of older people having this. —Mrs. E.H.

Mono or infectious mononucleosis has at least a couple of other names. One is glandular fever. Another is "the kissing disease," a term which might better not have been invented.

It is, as you say, common in teen agers and young adults, but seldom seen otherwise. The reason is that one attack of it usually confers immunity against further attacks — just as chickenpox is common in children but seldom seen in adults.

It causes changes in the blood that can be precisely identified, but the effect on the patient other than that is variable. Undue listlessness is one. Ordinarily some fever but maybe not much. Swollen and usually painful lymph glands develop.

Some young people may have a few weeks of losing all their pep but not be recognized as really ill. Quite often it's attributed to "a spell of being lazy." But they recover, and go back to normal, and everybody forgets about it.

Then again in more severe cases the swollen glands and extreme fatigue make it clear that some sort of illness is at work. Such cases generally are diagnosed; many of the lighter cases aren't.

One characteristic of the disease is that relapses can occur, so plenty of rest and good nourishment are advisable not only in the acute stages of mono but afterward, too.

As to the disease returning after once being cured (or rather curing itself) this has been reported but is rare.

But since mono can resemble some other diseases, I would suggest blood tests to make sure of the diagnosis.

The ailment sneaks up so unostenta-do with it. Apparently it's a virus, although the exact nature of the virus hasn't been determined. Maybe a better name for it would be "the bad grades syndrome."

The disease is common enough that I have a booklet on it available by sending 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me. Ask for "Mononucleosis: What It Is; What to Do."

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there such a thing as varicose veins in the hands? Can they be suered surgically? I am in my 30s and, except for my hands, am in excellent physical condition. The veins are getting thicker and bluer by the month and cause me quite a bit of embarrassment. —Mrs. A.W.

Veins in the hands may become quite prominent, but they aren't varicose — you don't have blood stagnating in the veins because of faulty valves.

This seems to be a rather common cause of worry, but it shouldn't be. The fact that the veins can be seen and have a bluish cast doesn't mean anything is wrong with them.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Should a young girl ride a horse during her menstrual period? —M.G.K.

There's no reason why she shouldn't.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble" is the title of Dr. Thosteson's newly revised booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is and encouraging sinus sufferers to do something about it. For a copy write to him in care of The Post

Veteran expert wins team match

A team headed by veteran expert B Jay Becker (68 years old and still as good as ever) won a playoff in Lancaster, Pa., a few weeks ago, earning the right to represent North America in the 1973 world championship. They won decisively from my team, but today's hand may indicate that we gave them something to think about now and then.

Opening lead — ♣ 6

At the first table of the match, William Grieve, a member of my team, got to four hearts and made it. Incidentally, if you're puzzled by North's jump to three notrump, relax: Grieve and his partner, George Rapee, use this response as a forcing raise of the original bid, not as a true notrump bid.

Grieve took the queen of clubs, drew a few rounds of trumps and then cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to dummy's king. When this held, he returned the low spade from dummy.

East stepped up with the queen of spades and craftily returned the queen of diamonds. If South held K-x-x of diamonds, he might play low on the assumption that East had led from Q-J-x of diamonds. If so, East would lead a low diamond next, and thus might hornswoogle his way into getting three diamond tricks.

It was a good plot, but South had the nine of diamonds and could therefore afford to cover the queen of diamonds with the king. When this won, South was home.

At the other table of the match, Becker opened the South hand with one heart, and Los Angeles expert Lew Mathe overcalled with one spade! Don't take this overcall as a model; just admire it from a distance.

Don Krauss bid four spaces with the East hand, and Becker could no longer play the hand at four hearts. He could have collected a penalty of 500 points, but he chose to bid on — and was down one at five hearts.

Daily question

Partners opens with one heart, and the next player passes. You hold: S-K 4, H-K 9 6 5 4 2, D-10 5 4, C-K 3. What do you say?

Answer: Using standard methods, bid three hearts. The hand is a shade too powerful for a shutout jump to four hearts.

12 Attica inmates face grand jury indictments

WARSAW, N.Y. (AP) — Twelve men who were inmates at Attica state prison during a bloody uprising a little more than a year ago have been arraigned on charges ranging from murder to assault.

The first of the 37 indictments handed down by a special grand jury that studied the rebellion were opened Monday in the county courthouse in this upstate New York village.

More indictments are expected to be opened this week as the state tries to fix the blame for the rebellion, which claimed 43 lives.

Innocent pleas were entered for each of the 12, and the men were taken to Auburn state prison to await further court proceedings.

Outside, a small group of pickets chanted, "Attica means fight back," and, "Hands off the Attica brothers — fight the racist frame-ups."

One of the accused men refused to enter the building, telling his guards: "If I'm going in there, you're going to have to carry me."

Two guards lifted him by the arms and carried him up the rear fire escape to the second floor courtroom.

Murder charges were lodged against three men — Charles Pernasclice, 20, of the Syracuse suburb of Camillus, and two others identified only as John Hill and Mariano Gonzales.

Pernasclice and Hill were charged with the beating of guard John Quinn, who was caught inside the compound on the first day of the four-day uprising. Gonzales was charged with the stabbing of Michael Privitera of Buffalo, who was in prison on a murder conviction.

The charges against the other men largely involved the assault and kidnapping of guards and the use of weapons that were seized.

Several guards were taken hostage in the opening hours of the rebellion. The revolt was quelled when armed state troopers stormed the rebel-held section of the prison. Their gunfire was blamed by a special state investigation commission for most of the deaths in the rebellion.

Truck smashes dream

By IRENE SHADOAN
Associated Press Writer
WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — The pretty blonde wife of Joseph R. Biden Jr. was at his side through his campaign. They rejoiced in victory last month when he became the youngest man to be elected to the U. S. Senate in this century.

Biden, an intensely family oriented man, had said earlier that he wanted his wife Nela to get a doctorate and teach college when their children were older. In the meantime, he said, he wanted her "to mold my children."

Biden's plans for his family ended in tragedy Monday when a tractor-trailer truck slammed into the family station wagon near Hockessin.

Mrs. Biden and the couple's 18-month-old daughter Amy were killed and the Bidens' two young sons were injured. Joseph, 4, sustained leg injuries. Robert, 3, suffered head injuries.

Also hospitalized was the truck driver, Curtis C. Dunn, 43, of Avondale, Pa.

Police said the station wagon "pulled from a stop sign" and was struck on the left side by the truck, "continuing approximately 150 feet, spinning around, going backwards down an embankment, and striking three trees."

Biden, 30, a Democrat, was in Washington at the time, working on staff appointments. He flew back to Wilmington and arrived at the hospital with his sister and campaign managers.

A half-hour later he departed with his son Robert in an ambulance.

In an apparent effort to reassure the child, Biden said: "I'm going to jump right in there with you, son."

The boy was transferred to Delaware Division Hospital nearby.

Biden met his wife, a native of Skaneateles, N.Y., during his junior year at the University of Delaware. Two years later, in 1965 after he finished his first year at Syracuse Law School, the two were married. Mrs. Biden had been on the dean's list and was homecoming queen at Syracuse.

Biden, a Wilmington lawyer and New Castle County Councilman, had been soaring on the crest of victory after defeating veteran U.S. Sen. J. Caleb Boggs, R-Del., in the Nov. 7 general election. At that time Biden was still 13 days shy of his 30th birthday, the minimum age required to be a U.S. Senator.

Lavelle claims he discussed raids

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. John D. Lavelle told congressmen last summer he discussed unauthorized air strikes on a MIG airfield and on enemy trucks with Gen. Creighton Abrams before he ordered them.

According to the hearing transcript released Monday, the ousted U.S. air commander did not testify that Abrams, then commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam and now Army chief of staff, approved the raids.

But he testified under oath: "Some of these strikes my superior absolutely knew."

Abrams has denied knowledge of the exact nature of the raids.

Lavelle's June 12 testimony was released by the House armed services investigating subcommittee Monday along with a report concluding that Lavelle's air strikes just before the 1968 bombing halt was lifted last spring "were not only proper, but essential."

Lavelle testified that he told Abrams specifically of strikes on the Dong Hoi airfield in North Vietnam and on anti-aircraft missiles and related equipment including trucks and vans.

"I knew I was going to lose a gunship eventually if I let them (the new missile sites) in," Lavelle testified. "I told him (Abrams) I was going to have to get them."

In its report, the subcommittee took no stand on whether Lavelle's actions violated the fundamental rule of civilian control of the military.

"Gen. Lavelle's efforts to give his pilots a fighting chance against the improved enemy system were not only proper but essential," the subcommittee said in a report released Monday.

The subcommittee criticized the restrictions placed on commanders during the period which permitted only "protective reaction" strikes when aircraft were attacked or detected enemy missile-linked radar. The rules were dubbed one of the most "peculiar aspects" of the war.

Lavelle ordered some 28 air strikes in violation of the rules of engagement between Nov. 7, 1971, and March 9, 1972. The resumption of bombing shortly thereafter in April "appears to have resulted in a significant increase in the earnestness of the North Vietnamese peace negotiators," said the report.

Four airmen convicted

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — The Air Force has concluded its general court martial of four airmen convicted of conspiracy to commit arson at the Duluth Air Base last July.

The four were judged guilty in connection with an alleged plot to burn the base officer's clubs, a barracks, the base supply building and the headquarters buildings.

Airman I.C. Maurice M. Hursey, 22, Memphis, Tenn., was sentenced to confinement with hard labor for six months, forfeiture of pay and reduction to lowest enlisted grade.

Airman John G. Cole, 20, Jacksonville, Fla., was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge, confinement to hard labor for one year and forfeiture of pay. He also was convicted of simple arson.

Airman Jimmy L. Martin, 22, Milwaukee, Wis., was sentenced to a dishonorable discharge and two years confinement to hard labor. Martin also was convicted of being absent without leave.

Airman Ozell Smith Jr., 20, St. Louis, Mo., was sentenced to a bad conduct discharge, confinement to hard labor for six months and reduction to lowest enlisted grade. Smith also was convicted of attempted arson.

City official killed by assassins

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Three men kidnaped a Protestant city councilman in Armagh during the night and killed him with two shots in the head.

The hooded body of William Johnston was found in the back of a car near the border with the Irish Republic. Police said they presumed the assassins fled into the republic.

Johnston, a father of two in his late 40s, was the 109th victim this year of the murder squads which have been settling grudges amid the Protestant-Catholic warfare over Northern Ireland's future. He was the 668th confirmed tatabty in more than three years of the communal violence.

Friends said Johnston, the owner of a drapery store, visited a house in a Catholic sector with an employee, William Bratty, to discuss some new carpets. Three armed men forced their way into the house and ordered Johnston and Bratty into their car. Bratty was badly beaten and told newsmen he had been "kicked out of the car" while Johnston was shot.

In Belfast, a 6-year-old girl and a policeman were each shot in the leg Monday night, but neither was seriously hurt. The girl was standing near guerrillas who shot at a car in the Catholic Falls Road area. The policeman was hit by two gunmen who fired into his car.

The British government announced a $36 million, five-year plan to provide jobs for unemployed in Northern Ireland on environmental projects. It hopes the work program will lessen the risk of jobless men drifting into the guerrilla ranks through frustration or boredom.

'Tony' Boyle resigns as president of UMW

WASHINGTON (AP) — W. A. "Tony" Boyle has resigned as president of the United Mine Workers union, opening the way for a speedy takeover by the reformers who defeated him in court and the coal fields.

Boyle ended his 10-year grip on the union presidency and his years-long fight against the insurgent Miners for Democracy with a terse resignation before a closed meeting of the union's International Executive Board in New York Monday.

There was no public elaboration by Boyle forces. There had been speculation that Boyle might reform candidate election in which reform candidate Arnold Miller defeated the 70-year-old Boyle handily.

Freeze solution to revenue problem?

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The City Council finance committee will recommend Wednesday night that aldermen freeze all major purchases and projects until the 1973 budget can be reviewed to establish guidelines to compensate for a $700,000 loss in federal revenue sharing funds.

The committee voted Monday night to set the second council meeting in January as a deadline by when the guidelines should be set. The effect of the guidelines apparently would be to restrict spending for certain items even though the money was budgeted.

Appleton officials learned earlier this month that the city would receive less than federal revenue sharing funds than anticipated in November when the city budget was adopted, thus leaving the city short of revenue for its 1973 operating budget. The tax rate has been set and would not be changed by any spending guideline action.

At least one alderman, Roy Pointer (14th), urged the committee to hold off taking any action until Mayor James Sutherland comes up with some recommendations — which he apparently is preparing. However, Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd) urged the committee to act, warning "we've got a real serious problem on our hands."

Kalata and other aldermen attending the meeting urged the committee to start the machinery rolling toward compensating for the revenue loss.

Kalata, who had prepared a resolution earlier to stimulate some council action on the matter, said he believed the council should put spending controls on the 1973 budget funds and monitor it during the entire year to avoid a huge deficit at year's end.

He received support from two aldermen who weren't members of the finance committee — Alvin Tews (5th) and Edward Maloney (9th).

Tews said he believed strongly that the 1973 operating budget should be reviewed again so that cuts could be made in formerly allowed expenditures to make up all or most of the shortage. He said he wasn't calling for a new tax rate, which may be physically and legally difficult if not impossible, but only spending guidelines.

Maloney said the entire budget should be reviewed. He noted that early spending problems could arise, such as in other committees spending budgeted funds early in the year and leaving no opportunity for cutbacks later to meet the deficit.

Ald. Judith Winzenz (12th), committee chairman, said she was confident the mayor was working on the revenue loss problem and that he would be aware of the urgency.

She said one problem now was that the exact revenue sharing figures still weren't received. She also told the committee that there is "fat" in the budget that could help ease the loss, as well as other ways to handle the deficit.

Pointer reminded aldermen that the city is working with an executive budget, which entails the mayor preparing the budget and submitting it to the council, and he suggested that the council should let Sutherland bring his recommendations to the finance committee and council before acting.

He contended that the council could make up a large part of the revenue loss through holding off payments until late in the year to collect interest on that money and other budgeting techniques.

Tews said holding down equipment purchases wouldn't be adequate to eliminate the anticipated deficit. He said the entire budget must be looked at.

Reynold Running, city finance director, said the anticipated loss represented about 5 per cent of the city budget, excluding the school and Outagamie County portions. He expressed concern that the revenue loss figure could be larger in 1973 and that he had no confidence in what the federal government said until he saw the amount on the check.

In other action, the finance committee deferred to executive session Wednesday the consideration of the 1973 compensation policy for department heads, supervisors and certain nonunion employees under the council jurisdiction, as well as the labor contract with the International Union of Firefighters.

model for future sales of the shredder by A-C.

Ald. Orville Strutz (17th) refused to allow the council's committee, which he chairs, to vote on a resolution that would have pledged the city to participate in any county disposal system costing the city less than the $3.80 per ton it now spends on disposal.

Strutz said the city lacks sufficient information to compare costs of the two methods. "We have got a lot of study to do here yet," he told the committee.

But Public Works Director Robert Miller, who helped county officials prepare cost analysis tables that convinced a majority of county board members that the shredder operation would be cheaper, said further study would require hiring an engineering consultant.

Aldermen favoring immediate action agreed with Miller that the city should agree to participate in any countywide system that would save the city money.

Panel divided on incinerator vs. shredder

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The backstage battle between rival dealers in solid waste disposal equipment burst into public view again Monday among aldermen on the Appleton City Council Streets and Sanitation Committee.

After bitter debate, the committee decided to put off action for two weeks, a decision interpreted as designed to give opposing forces more time to muster their troops.

The dispute, which has caught up members of first the Outagamie County Board and now the City Council, is essentially between Allis-Chalmers, manufacturers of a hammermill waste shredder, and City Incinerator of Wisconsin, Inc., holders of patent rights on a batch-incinerator.

The county board has given preliminary approval to an Allis Chalmers offer to provide the county with the hammermill at the manufacturer's cost, to handle the county's waste and to serve as a demonstration

CATV due by early in 1973

Appleton's cable television (CATV) system should be ready to serve its first customers soon after Jan. 1, a spokesman for Fox Cities Communications has told city officials.

Franklin Nehs, secretary of the firm holding the city's CATV franchise, said the entire system of cable is expected to be installed by the end of next July, with the segment south of the Fox River completed before the end of this month.

Nehs announced the following steps

Businessman, former coach dies at age 44

LITTLE CHUTE — Richard J. Vander Wyst, 44, vice president and general manager of Essential Products Corp. here, died unexpectedly about 9:30 p.m. Monday.

According to Outagamie Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, Vander Wyst, 613 Taylor St., collapsed and died in his home from heart failure. He had been scraping snow from the roof of his house. The victim had no history of heart trouble, according to the coroner.

Little Chute police and rescue squad members tried unsuccessfully to revive Vander Wyst.

Vander Wyst was a former basketball coach of St. John Grade School and the Little Chute public grade school. He was a member of the Little Chute Businessmen's Association, St. John's Athletic Association and the past president of the Little Chute Quarterback Club. He also was a WIAA basketball official.

He is survived by his widow, four daughters, one son, one brother, three sisters, three step-brothers and three step-sisters.

The funeral will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at St. John Catholic Church with the Rev. Norbert Vande Loo officiating. Burial will be in the parish cemetery.

Friends may call at the Verkuilen Funeral Home after 3 p.m. Wednesday. A prayer service will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

already completed toward providing an operating CATV system:

— The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has granted the firm a certificate of compliance with FCC rules, which is required before the system is allowed to import television signals and distribute them to subscribers.

— The company has bought and is occupying headquarters at 1620 S. Lawe St.

— The main signal-reception tower has been built in the Town of Harrison southeast of the city, and the "head end" building, housing electronic gear to handle signals received at the tower, is built.

— Work is nearing completion on installing approximately 50 miles of cable, strung from telephone and electric power poles, on the city's south side.

According to Nehs, the south side represents about one-third of the total length of cable that will be necessary to serve the entire city. The cable is installed in two steps. First, "strand" wire is strung between the poles, to support the message-carrying cable, then the cable is suspended from the strand.

Installation of strand wire will begin in the one-third of the city immediately north of the river in January, Nehs reported.

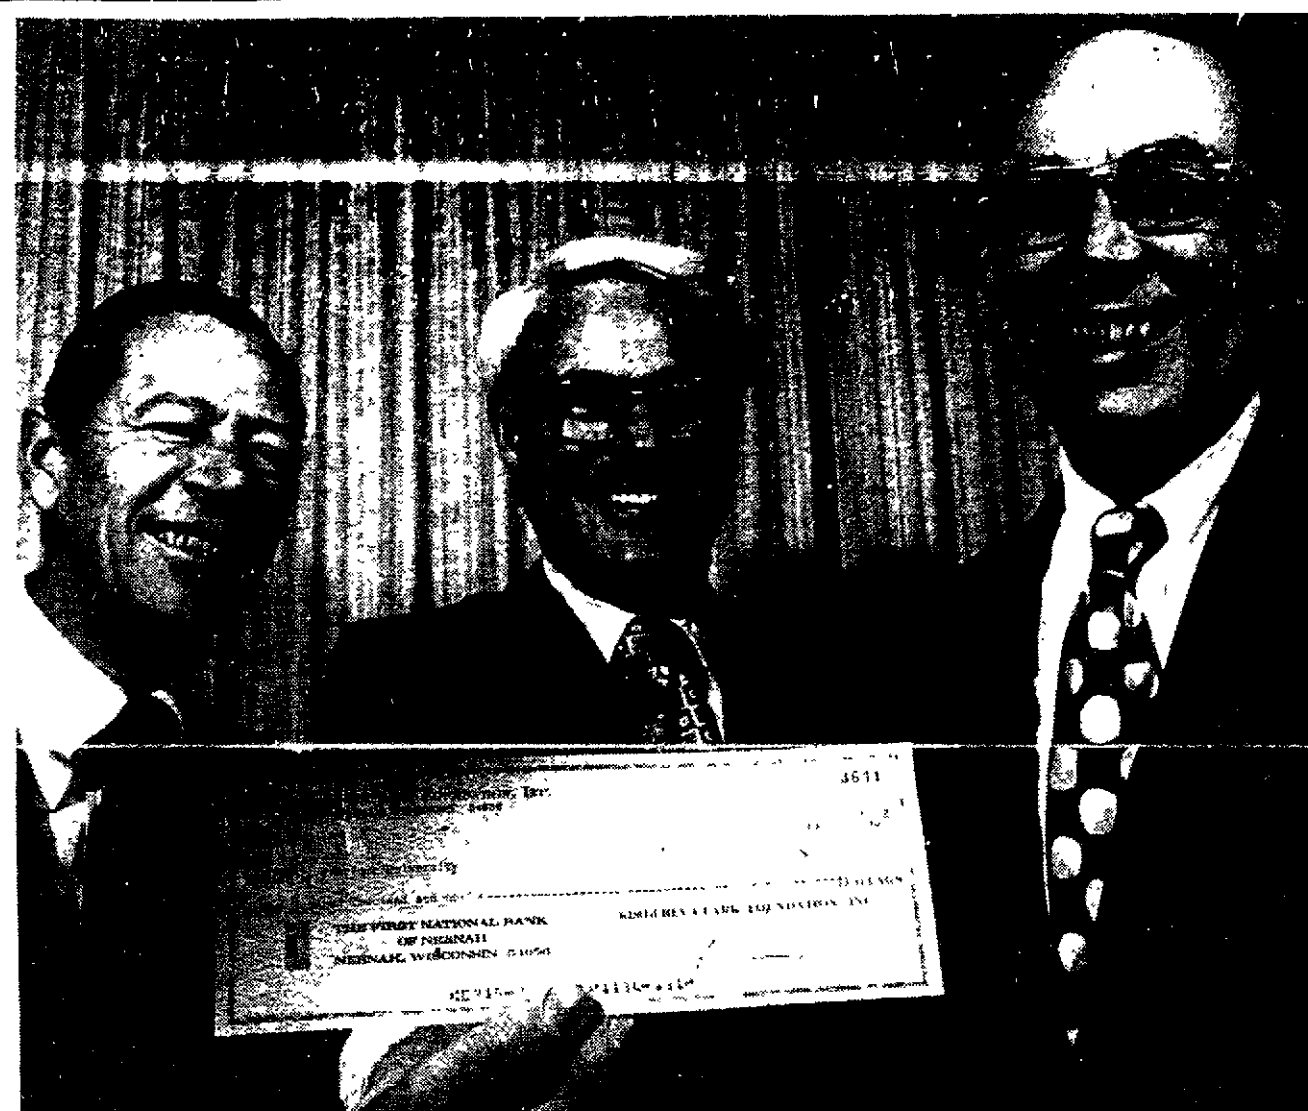

Individual offices and households are attached to the cable by means of a service line, just as phone and electric service is provided.

The customer's television receiver is hooked up the same way an antenna is connected to the set.

Nehs said initial operations will provide "at least" Channels 2, 5, 11 and 38, Green Bay, and in addition channels carrying weather, news and stock market reports and FM background music.

Microwave facilities still are being built to bring in independent stations, Channel 18, Milwaukee, and Channel 9, Chicago, Nehs said.

The company also must still install studio facilities in its headquarters building, to provide local-origination programming. Nehs said studio construction will begin after the rest of the system is completed.

A happy moment

K-C gives LU $100,000

Kimberly-Clark Corp., Neenah, has put Lawrence University $100,000 nearer its goal of $10 million for endowment and physical improvements.

Kimberly-Clark's gift was announced today by Frederic O. Leech, chairman of the Lawrence board of trustees, and George Banta III, general chairman of the Lawrence Leadership Fund, the name given to the university's nationwide capital campaign.

J. J. Shipman, Kimberly-Clark vice president for public interest and affairs, presented a check for $100,000 to Dr. Thomas S. Smith, Lawrence University president. Shipman cited the company's long association with Lawrence and expressed hope that the gift would set an example for others.

"Kimberly-Clark and Lawrence have been friends and neighbors for more than 100 years," Shipman said. "For us, this has meant that alumni of the university have contributed much as members of the company's management. For you, it has encouraged participation by Kimberly-Clark people in university affairs."

"Symbolically, this gift recognizes that higher education is fundamentally important to business. We hope it will prove an incentive for your other neighbors to similarly share in Lawrence's future and perhaps provide an example for other business and academic friends and neighbors in communities everywhere."

In his response, Smith said:

"On behalf of the Lawrence University community, I wish to express our deep appreciation to Kimberly Clark for this most generous gift. During the past century Kimberly-Clark and Lawrence University have been neighbors in the Fox Valley, and, throughout that time, Lawrence has derived much of its strength from the strength of Kimberly-Clark."

"Support of independent private higher education by independent industries of our free enterprise system is essential to the freedom of both. We thank Kimberly-Clark for doing more than its share in general and particularly for helping Lawrence University."

One present and one former Kimberly-Clark executive serve on the university's 40-member board of trustees. They are Harry J. Sheerin, executive vice president, and William M. Wright, retired vice president and director.

Of the $10 million to be raised in Lawrence's campaign, $3.75 million will be used for a new library, $3.5 million for endowment, $625,000 each for expansion of the Worcester Art Center and an addition to Yenching Hall of Science, $500,000 for renovation of 119-year-old Main Hall, $750,000 for renovation of other buildings, and $250,000 for land acquisition.

Plan would cut UW Center fees

Lower fees for students attending University of Wisconsin two-year centers could be one of the results of a proposed pilot project at Fond du Lac.

The experiment would combine the vocational school and UW Center Fond du Lac, among other things, under a uniform fee schedule for college-type courses.

Dr. Donald Percy, senior vice president of the UW system, said today he believed the huge disparity between vocational and center fees was an important factor in the slipping enrollments of the two-year centers.

The per credit cost at the UW Center-Fox Valley, Menasha, is $20.45 while the cost at the three vocational schools offering college courses is $8. Fox Valley Technical Institute doesn't offer college courses but a spokesman noted some of its courses were transferable to colleges.

Normal vocational courses aren't on a per credit basis but Percy said they averaged about $3 per credit.

The Menasha campus' enrollment last September was 439 compared with late 1960's enrollments of around 700.

Percy, who appeared along with UW President John Weaver and other UW officials on the second Educational Telephone Network news conference, said in an interview after the program that he believed there were other factors causing low enrollments at centers, such as the slackened draft call and students' decisions to take jobs.

But, he added, that with two or three years of experimenting at the Fond du Lac campus, he believed his position would be proven — that fees play a key role. The centers had lower fees than the main UW campuses before the merger of the UW system.

The Fond du Lac experiment still hinges on the State Vocational Board which has yet to respond to the UW regents' offer to embark on the pilot project. Weaver said over the ETN broadcast this morning there still had been no official response from the vocational board, but that it hadn't met since the regents' action.

On the ETN which was broadcast at the Menasha campus, as well as other locations across the state, Percy said a full school didn't cost significantly more to operate than a half-full one.

He also said later the fees collected from students didn't represent a major source of funds for the schools.

Percy said the Fond du Lac campus provided an ideal setting for the pilot because the vocational school could build its technical facility adjacent to the center facility, and the center had additional space for some vocational students since the center was only half-full, although on schedule to full enrollment by the late 1970's.

The center system chancellor several weeks ago indicated his opposition to a wholesale merging of vocational and center schools. The Menasha center faculty expressed concern about the possibility, and the vocational officials apparently aren't interested in a merger of facilities.

Percy declined to comment on possibility of building mergers at in the Fox Cities, although it apparently would be a consideration.

DeLaHunt named

Russel J. DeLaHunt, chairman of the Outagamie County Board, has been named to the ruling committee of the Wisconsin County Boards Association for the Lake Winnebago group, the association has announced.

Neenah eyes doubling efforts on clear water

NEENAH — Backed by a no-nonsense state and federal attitude, Public Works Director Wayne Bryan is calling doubling the city's effort to eliminate clear water infiltration into the sanitary sewer system.

What Bryan's suggestion means is instead of spending about $200,000 a year for separation and sewer repair, the city may have to pump in about $400,000 in each of the next two years to get the project completed before the

$5,937 more for city buses

The city council's finance committee Monday recommended paying Appleton City Transit, Inc., $5,937.72 to cover operating losses claimed by the bus company on city services during November.

If approved by the council, the payment will bring to more than $21,000 the sum the city will have paid the bus line since Sept. 1 when an open-end subsidy was instituted to prevent abandonment of service.

The city paid $8,128 for September losses and $7,058 for October. The declining loss claims apparently reflect the normal increase in bus business during the winter. But recent state Department of Transportation reports have shown the line still running well below monthly rider counts of a year ago.

If the city stops paying all bus line operating losses, the Public Service Commission has said it will allow the line to discontinue service.

Before the PSC's September ruling, the city had been paying $2,000 per month to subsidize the line.

Finance Director Reynold Running told the finance committee Monday that the bus subsidy account was $7,185 in the red going into the meeting. The committee recommended fund transfers of $8,026 from the city contingency fund, and surplus of $5,100 from the Social Security account, to put the subsidy account back in the black and cover the November loss.

new sewage treatment plant goes on line.

Mayor Roman V. Hauser said today that he planned to push for implementation of Bryan's program. "We have to do it now," the mayor predicted, referring to the hard line being taken by state and federal agencies.

Reporting on last week's meeting with Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Bryan said, "I think all who attended the meeting feel that the EPA and DNR will continue a stringent enforcement policy until the Fox River as it leaves Neenah is in as good or better condition than it is as it leaves Lake Winnebago."

One of the city's major problems, as with all older cities, is a leaky sanitary sewer system. For the past three years, Bryan has proposed a program to solve the problem as soon as possible — but the request has traditionally been the victim of budget-minded councilmen.

Now it appears that the showdown is near. Either the clear water is eliminated or a treatment plant large enough to treat it all will have to be built.

Next week, Bryan plans to bring a timetable and firm cost estimates before the street and public works committee which calls for completing the entire clear water separation program by June 30, 1975.

In conjunction with American Pipes Services (now called American Consulting Services), Bryan laid out a four-point program leading to a television check of every leaky sewer in the city's 80-mile long system.

The four points include:
—Survey and rainfall simulation to pinpoint areas where storm water is transferring from the storm to sanitary sewers.

—City cleaning of all sewers.
—Television inspection and in-line sealing.

—Repairing leaks spotted by the all seeing eye of the TV camera.

Clear water problems plague Menasha, too

MENASHA — Before the city can come up with a schedule for meeting federal-state clear water separation requirements, it must pass an ordinance that prohibits connection of sump pumps to the sanitary sewer system.

That's what acting Public Works Director Stanley Martenson told aldermen at Monday's committee-of-the-whole meeting.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has given the city until Feb. 1 to come up with a time schedule for separating clear water from its sanitary sewer system. Although it is uncertain yet whether this will mean the city must require all homes to have sump pumps, officials were told last week that the city must see that present sump pumps are discharging into the ground, not into the sanitary sewers.

Martenson said there are about 800 homes with sump pumps in the city. He said it would take individual inspection of all those homes to make sure their pumps are discharging properly.

Martenson told aldermen he would have a proposed time schedule for solving the clear water problem ready for consideration at the Jan. 16 meeting. Aldermen must pass a resolution approving the time schedule before Feb. 1.

In other action at Monday's committee-of-the-whole:

—Mayor James Adams said it may take until mid-March to get 1973 tax bills out to property owners, if aldermen vote to change the city budget tonight.

Fourth Ward Ald. Felix Ropella, Jr., told aldermen he would move for reconsideration of the budget, which was passed with a 7-5 council vote at the Dec. 5 meeting.

Third Ward Ald. Sumner Parker said the ordering of new tax bills and the additional computations could mean that tax bills won't get out until late February. Adams, however, said that was a "conservative figure."

"The whole tax roll will have to be re-computed," he said.

City Atty. Richard Steffens said taxpayers can pay taxes in advance of receiving a tax bill, however. Such payments would be based on last year's tax rate, which was eight cents less than the one adopted for 1973.

—The public protection committee approved temporary no-parking regulations for Second, Fourth, Lake and Prospect streets, between Tayco and Little Lake Butte des Morts.

The committee acted to prohibit parking on the south sides of those streets for the next 90 days. The move is being made because homeowners there are having problems with snow removal and parking because of the parking done in the area by ice fishermen using Little Lake Butte des Morts.

The no-parking prohibition will not continue in the ice fishing off-season.

AFDC lag blamed on staffing

There is a woman in Winnebago County who has recently had to foreclose on her home, spend her last $30 on insurance, can't afford badly needed dental care and is expecting a sparse Christmas for her children.

The woman applied to the county department of social services for Aid for Dependent Children (AFDC) on Nov. 8. Though federal law stipulates there be no more than a 30-day waiting period, there's no indication that she will receive help in the near future.

She is a victim of an understaffed income maintenance division of the social services department and, according to Fox Valley Family Services, Director Robert Gellert, there are at least 15 other families he knows of who are experiencing similar hardships.

"The county, in its efforts to save money, has gone too far," Gellert stated.

The inability of social services to process applicants within 30 days is probably due to an increase in the numbers of persons eligible for aid, Gellert said.

A move by the federal government a year ago created a new category called AFDC-U. It allows for aid to families in which the father is present but unemployed.

Mrs. L. M. Preisen, director of the Menasha-Neenah Relief Group, stated that a worsening of the unemployment problem in Neenah-Menasha, as well as Oshkosh, has caused a mushrooming of applicants. She estimated that the social services department has about 35 additional cases per month to process and a staff that can't handle it.

Tree fire damages house

KIMBERLY — The Melvin Bunnow house at 315 S. Ann St. was heavily damaged by a fire which started in the basement about 7:40 p.m. Monday.

Village Fire Chief William Van Hout said the fire broke out in a recreation room containing a Christmas tree and other combustible material.

He said one of the Bunnow children had been in the recreation room but went upstairs, leaving two candles burning in the room.

One candle apparently tipped off a cardboard box and ignited the Christmas tree, Van Hout said. When the child returned downstairs, the room was in flames.

Van Hout did not have an estimate of damages. The fire was confined to the Open house planned to honor retiring children's librarian

KAUKAUNA — Mrs. Myron Black, children's librarian at the public library for the past 11 years, will be retiring this month and an open house will be held in her honor on Wednesday at the library.

Under her leadership the children's department of the library has been expanded greatly, and each summer her reading program attracted more children.

During National Book Week each year, children from all city schools have the opportunity to visit the library to learn what facilities are available to them.

Yule party scheduled for Greenville children
GREENVILLE — The Greenville Civic Club Inc. will have a Christmas party for area children at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Greenville Municipal Building.

Norman Julius was appointed program chairman and Norbert Sigl will take care of the lunch for the next year. Dues will stay the same.

Three new men were named to the planning committee, including Dick Van Lyssel, John Kreutzberg and Ralph Poepke. The auditing committee includes Robert Peeters, Wynn Dobberstein and Peter Bekkers.

Bar's version of probate reform ripped

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The legal profession's reaction to probate reform was described Monday as an attempt to revise Wisconsin statutes so that heirs would be "tied down worse than ever."

Walter G. E. Heiden, chairman of Wisconsin Citizens for Probate Reform, said a probate bill proposed Friday by the State Bar of Wisconsin reflects a warning he received a few days earlier from Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Heiden's committee of citizens reports having collected more than 230,000 signatures on petitions to be handed to the 1973 legislature.

The petitions are in support of demands that laws be revised to allow citizens to bypass probate courts, excessive lawyers' fees and unnecessary red tape.

The state bar's board of governors approved Friday an alternate proposal. A bar study committee had said lawyers, under the proposal, "might take an even greater role in handling the complexities" of administering wills.

The plan presented by the committee would allow some legal work to be bypassed if there were no minors among the heirs, if all heirs agreed to the procedure, and if the heirs' choice of a personal representative agreed to post a bond.

Heiden said he suspects the bar's plan would lead to even greater confusion for the layman, and that it "would take more time to process a will than under current laws."

"Attorneys are out to pull another one," he said.

Heiden said his committee received a letter a week ago from Lucey, urging the group to appeal to legislators for "a strong probate reform bill."

He quoted the governor as saying: "There will be attempts to block it in committee and water it down with various amendments."

Heiden said it is possible the legal profession may be proposing an even more-entangling method of probate so that attorneys will have something to yield without great price when the legislature begins debating a reform bill.

The plan approved by the state bar's board of governors, he said, would leave citizens "tied down worse than ever" to having wills handled by lawyers.

The legal profession, he remarked, is too biased to be expected to want true reform, "judging by the performance of our laws by lawyers and the Supreme Court, which is just more lawyers."

State boy, 10, finalist in football contest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A St. Croix Falls, Wis., boy has won the divisional semi-finals of the Punt, Pass and Kick contest and will represent the Minnesota Vikings at the finals in Los Angeles.

Steven Edling, 10, won his division of the annual Ford Motor Co. competition Saturday during the halftime of the Minnesota Vikings-San Francisco 49ers National Football League game in California.

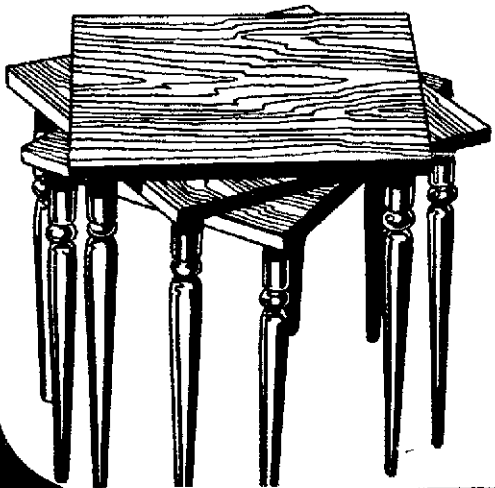

Young Steven is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edling of St. Croix Falls.

He was the only one of six boys representing the Vikings to win in Saturday's competition.

The national finals will be held during the halftime of the Super Bowl game in Los Angeles in January.

Juvenile home could be used by older youths

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Outagamie County's Juvenile Receiving Home might be used only to house youngsters over 13 years old if the state approves and if new "parents" can be found.

The future of the home, which has operated off and on since 1967, appeared uncertain after Mr. and Mrs. Paul Young said two weeks ago they will quit as operators March 1. The receiving home is in a county-owned building at 523 S. Walnut St.

County Welfare Director James E. Stampf told his Board of Social Services that, because of the tremendous demands on the receiving home parents, he had little hopes of finding replacements for the Youngs.

The situation was further complicated by the possibility that the state might not relicense the present home, primarily because there is not enough playground space. What was supposed to be a playground was blacktopped and used for a courthouse area parking lot.

For the past two years, Stampf told his board Monday night, the home has been permitted to operate under a provisional license from the state. He said he has learned informally that the state would not issue a new license, which would be necessary before the home could be operated under new parents.

Stampf said he now is thinking of placing children under 13 in a network of emergency foster homes that would be developed. Children 13 to 18 years old would continue to use the receiving home.

Use of the home for older children might be a way of skirting the state's licensing objections, Stampf explained. Large playground space is not so essential for older children, he said.

The receiving home was intended for use as an emergency and temporary care unit for children who are abused, neglected or dependent. However, it also has come to be used as a shelter care facility for juvenile offenders who need minimum custody.

The Youngs lease the three-story home from the county and are under contract with the Department of Social Services to provide care for children who are placed there.

Stampf said he is continuing to seek replacement parents and will maintain contact with the state regarding licensing.

Two weeks ago, when Stampf informed the board that the Youngs were resigning, he suggested the county look into using part of the County Health Center for a non-secure juvenile facility.

However, some members of the social services board objected to abandoning the receiving home, in which the county has an investment of more than $30,000.

In other action, the social services board commended Martin L. Downs for his efforts as chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Social Services. The committee, appointed a year ago, is an research and advisory arm of Stampf's department.

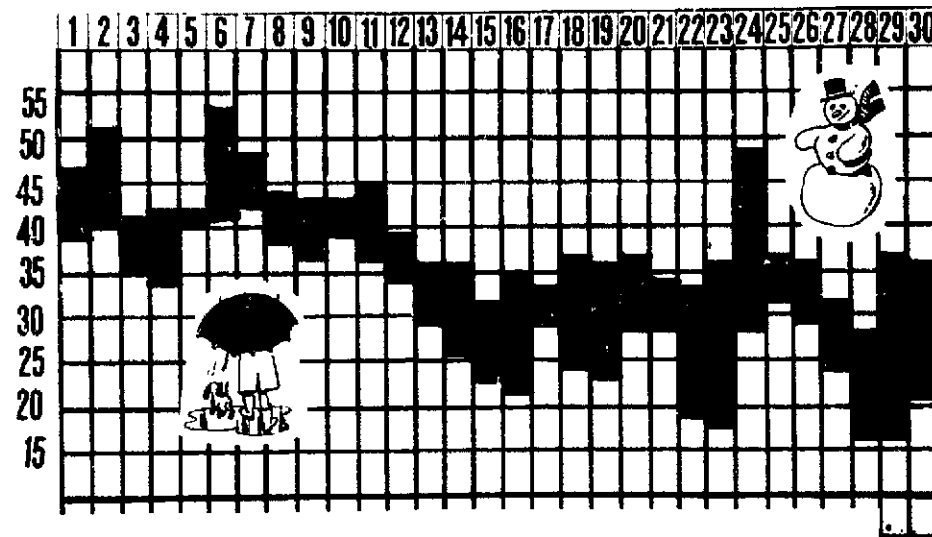

Panel okays bugging equipment for police

The Appleton Police Department won approval Monday to order electronic "bugging" equipment for $2,055.

The equipment consists of a transmitter, receiver and recorder.

The department had sought federal funds through the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, but was turned down due to the controversial nature of such surveillance gear.

State administrators of the federal aid program said they had never authorized purchase of that sort of

Weathermen record typical November

The month was cool and cloudy, much like the November most Wisconsinites are accustomed to.

Precipitation, including melted snow and rain, was 1.32 inches, .82 inches below the average; and the mean temperature was 34.5 degrees compared to the normal of 34.8 degrees.

The coldest temperature was 16 degrees recorded Nov. 28 and 29, while the warmest was 53 degrees recorded on Nov. 6.

Heating degree days in Appleton totaled 908 during the month, compared to a normal of 910 and the 1971 total for the month of 868.

The wind prevailed from the southwest at an average speed of 6.8 m.p.h., and there were 19 cloudy, one clear, and 10 partly cloudy days during the month.

December normals for Appleton include a mean temperature of 22.9 degrees and 1.39 inches of precipitation, including 8.3 inches of snow.

The mean temperature normally decreases from 26 degrees at the beginning of the month to 20 degrees at the end. Temperature extremes have been 59 degrees and minus 19 degrees.

Daily hours of daylight decrease from 10 hours, four minutes at the beginning of December to nine hours 48 minutes on Dec. 21 and then will increase to nine hours 57 minutes at the end of the month.

The U.S. Weather Bureau has forecasted below normal temperatures and precipitation.

Panel OK's bid on new police cars

Outagamie County traffic police will be patrolling with American Motors Ambassador pursuit cars next year.

The county board's finance committee Monday accepted the low bid of C&T American of Appleton for 20 squad cars. A portion of the cars will be delivered in January and the remainder in July.

Net cost to the county, including trade-in allowances, will be $45,192. Royal Dodge was second lowest bidder at a net county cost of $47,288 for 20 cars. Darrow Chrysler-Plymouth, the current squad car supplier, bid $51,837, highest of the five bidders. In between were Van Dyke Ford, $47,482 and Stumpf Ford, $51,760.

This will be the first time the county has used American Motors products for patrol work. The county presently has Plymouth squad cars and previously had Dodge.

All of the bids were for the "pursuit special" versions of the cars which include heavy-duty suspension systems, other heavy-duty equipment and a high-performance engine package.

Courts

A 12-member jury trial was scheduled for Jan. 9 for a 21-year-old Menasha man, charged with taking part in the March 8 armed robbery of an Appleton service station.

Richard G. Webb, 480 Nicolet Blvd., Menasha, entered a not guilty plea Monday when he appeared before Circuit Court Judge Gordon Myse. Webb appeared earlier in the day before Judge Urban P. Van Susteren in Outagamie County Court Branch 1, where the case was bound over to Circuit Court following a preliminary hearing.

The defendant is charged with the armed robbery of the Clark Station, 134 N. Richmond St., in which $309 was reportedly taken at gunpoint from the two attendants.

Myse ordered that Webb be released on a $5,000 signature bond.

Mark Marheine, 19, of 324 N. Sidney St., Kimberly, was found guilty on one count each of theft and unlawful entry to a locked vehicle when he appeared Monday before Judge Urban P. Van Susteren in Outagamie County Court Branch 1.

Marheine pleaded guilty to breaking into the car of another Appleton man on Oct. 22 and stealing a tape case with 16 stereo tapes while the vehicle was parked in the 1500 block of E. Cass Street.

Van Susteren set bail at $300 and ordered a presentence investigation.

Mark Stenz, 21, of 1732 N. Eugene St., was sentenced Monday to one year in the Outagamie County jail with Huber Law privileges after a Dec. 5 conviction on one count of forgery.

Stenz appeared before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2, where he previously had pleaded guilty to taking a check from an ex-roommate and cashing it on or about Nov. 3 for $80 at Pants & Pants, 107 W. College Ave.

Stenz also admitted taking 10 checks from another Appleton man and cashing seven of them, totaling $160, at the Midway Motor Lodge, Town of Grand Chute, between Nov. 20 and Nov. 27. No charges were issued on those checks, but the information was read into the court record.

Kenneth W. Burton, 21, of 2129 W. Second St., was sentenced Monday to 30 days in the Outagamie County jail after he was found guilty on one count of disorderly conduct by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Burton pleaded guilty to throwing stones at a Chicago & North Western train in the 1400 block of W. Fourth St. on Oct. 31.

Burton pleaded not guilty to a charge of driving after revocation in the 100 block of S. Superior Street on Oct. 6, so Schaefer scheduled a nonjury trial for Jan. 31, 1973.

In addition to those charges, Burton faces sentencing Friday on a Dec. 13 conviction in Circuit Court for a Nov. 28 burglary at the Badger Wrecking Co., Town of Grand Chute.

Open house set at day center for psychiatric care

Outagamie County's community approach to psychiatric treatment — Portal House Day Center — will be open to the public Thursday for tours and explanations of the program.

David Sharpe, program director, said group members would conduct the tours, answer questions and serve refreshments made at the center during the open house from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The county-owned house at 411 W. Sixth St. provides psychiatric treatment for county residents right in the community, away from an institution. Members attend the center for eight hours two, three, four or five days a week, depending on the amount of treatment they need. They spend the remainder of the day at home, coping with family situations and making daily decisions as a part of the therapy program. Sixteen members are being treated at the center now, Sharpe said. The center is not open weekends or evenings.

Waste Disposal . . .

Strutz argued that the city should bid out for the cheapest possible method, rather than settling for one that might cost the city less but still be more costly than another.

Advocates of committing the city to any less costly system said the county needs the city's tentative support in order to prepare the detailed plans that would produce firm cost figures.

Strutz challenged the preliminary county cost figures, which also have been challenged by Al C. Fischer, former county supervisor who is sales manager for City Incinerator. Strutz was unable to persuade the committee to hear Fischer personally.

While Strutz said he wanted to hear "the other side of the story," Miller pointed out that four disposal methods were considered in the county study, including the hammermill and the incinerator.

Miller said he was not a spokesman for the hammermill, but was defending the county study. Its figures show higher personnel, maintenance and other costs than Fischer's for the incinerator, boosting its costs above those of the hammermill.

Strutz did not give specific reasons for doubting the county figures. "I still say there are costs that could be worked out some way to be possibly cheaper than the shredder," he said.

Aldermen have been under pressure from both sides behind the scenes. There were references to contacts by "certain people" interested in the dispute. Strutz said he had been contacted by county supervisors who oppose the hammermill.

Ald. Glenn Thompson (13th), a non-member of the committee, told Strutz the situation "has become a political mess."

Ald. Edward Maloney (9th) voiced the strongest disagreement with Strutz among committee members. Maloney said the committee also should consider the side benefit of helping boost local business and employment if the Allis Chalmers offer is accepted and it helps the firm build a shredder business.

Turning down the A-C offer would be "a kick in the pants" to local industry, said Maloney. "We might as well throw our industrial development committee out."

Miller had been asked by the committee two weeks ago to review the county study and look for errors. He reported Monday that he had found differences of a few cents in the costs per ton of waste but had gone as far as he could without outside expert advice.

Miller said he now calculates shredder cost at $3.30 per ton of waste — $3.28 less 25 cents per ton it is estimated could be recovered by reclaiming ferrous metals.

The city now spends $3.80 per ton using the sanitary landfill method, and incineration was estimated to cost $3.64 per ton by the county study. Fischer has maintained that shredding would cost $3.83 and incineration $2.89.

Deny U. S. Fleet Needs Greek Bases

WASHINGTON — Hidden in an unnoticed report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is a revelation demolishing President Nixon's public rationale for military aid to the Greek military dictatorship: a frank admission from Israel's military high command that U. S. naval bases in Greece are not essential to Israeli security.

The report, submitted by Sen. Frank Church of Idaho following a trip to the Middle East, quotes "high military officials" in Israeli as contradicting Mr. Nixon's linkage of U. S. military aid to Greece with Israel's safety. Nor was Church quoting bureaucratic underlings or street rumors. In Tel Aviv, he conferred with two of Israel's top generals.

Greeks in Arab nations

Thus, Israel for the first time has conceded semi-officially that Greece, apprehensive about 60,000 Greek nationals in the Arab world, would never permit its naval bases to be used against Arab powers no matter what the form of government in Athens. Heretofore, the Israelis have refrained from admitting the obvious for fear of antagonizing the Nixon administration. The reason they have broken this reticence stems from a series of domestic American political maneuvers last summer.

The chain of events began July 17 when Sen. George McGovern, the new Democratic presidential nominee, wrote Greek exile leader Elias P. Demetracopolous in Washington promising, if elected, to halt all U. S. aid to the Greek dictatorship.

The release of McGovern's letter July 22 generated an orchestrated Republican response based on this hoary political tactic: tie an unpopular cause (the Greek dictators) to a popular one (Israel's survival).

On NBC's Meet the Press July 23, Nixon intimate John B. Connally claimed eliminating Greek aid would destroy "the very foundation of any security... in the Middle East." On July 24, Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, Senate minority leader, and Robert Dole of Kansas, Republican national chairman, delivered similar pronouncements.

On July 27, Mr. Nixon himself waded in. At an infrequent press conference, the President brought up Greek aid, though no question was asked. "Without aid to Greece..." he said, "you have no viable policy to save Israel."

In Athens, the colonels were apoplectic, fearful the Republican campaign barrage would undermine their relations with the Arabs. Greek newspapers, which had routinely received a wire service dispatch on Mr. Nixon's statement, were sent this frantic message from the government's Athens News Agency at 5:45 a.m., July 28: "To the editors: Please ignore cable from Washington concerning Nixon." The controlled Greek press obediently killed the story.

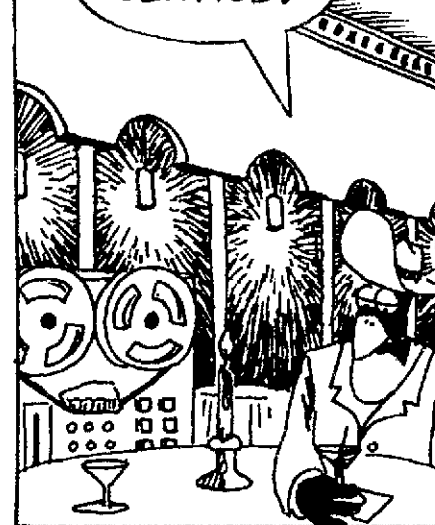

On Aug. 5, the Greek government

Hitchhiker killed in state road accident

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The death of a Waukesha County hitchhiker raised Wisconsin's 1972 highway fatality figure to 1,123 today compared with 1,083 on the same date a year ago.

A hitchhiker identified as Mrs. Harriet Allen, 38, believed en route to Minnesota from New York, was fatally injured Monday when struck by a car near a highway intersection north of Waukesha.

Lois Kirschbaum, 34, of rural Mount Horeb died Monday when her car skidded on icy pavement in Dane County and struck a tree.

Fuel supply to be checked

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The prospect of a fuel supply shortage in Wisconsin has prompted the state to check existing supplies of heating fuels, the Office of Emergency Government said Monday.

Deputy administrator Gordon Reese said a check was requested after two officially repudiated Mr. Nixon by declaring, quite unmistakably, that Greek bases could never be used against the Arabs. Pressed by Athens to patch up Greek-Arab relations, the White House on Aug. 7 backed away from Mr. Nixon's remarks. Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren indicated that the President meant to say Greek bases would help all allies, not just Israel. That modification, intended to placate the Greeks, was ignored by the U. S. press.

Nearly three weeks later, Sen. Church arrived in Israel to find officials irritated over being the shuttlecock in three-cornered political badminton between Greeks, Americans, and Arabs. On Aug. 24, he visited Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, director of Israeli military intelligence. On Aug. 26, he visited Lt. Gen. David Elazar, chief of the Israeli general staff.

Greek bases not essential

The conversations were off the record. But in his September report to the Foreign Relations Committee, Church quoted "high military officials" as follows: "It was made clear that, contrary to a recent statement by President Nixon... the crucial factor for Israel is only the maintenance of a strong U. S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean. They do not consider U. S. bases in Greece as essential to their security."

U. S. policymakers were unaware of Church's report. But Church informed Demetracopolous of the Israeli military appraisal in an Oct. 30 letter. Fully appreciating its political importance, Demetracopolous travelled to Europe last month to brief top Greek exile leaders.

With the Israeli contradiction, Mr. Nixon is running out of reasons for continuing to support the Greek dictatorship. As we reported earlier, the Navy selected Greece for 6th Fleet home ports without investigating alternative possibilities. Now, the Israeli military has ruined the argument, absurd from the start, that the 6th Fleet can come to Israel's rescue only if based in Greece.

Good things come in little oak barrels.

It's Christmas. You've got a friend who likes brandy. And he's the kind of friend who deserves a good thing.

Well, you should know, in brandy, good things come in little oak barrels.

That's because little barrels bring the wood and the brandy closer together.

And it's the wood that makes a brandy smooth.

Almaden Brandy is aged in little oak barrels. And it's as smooth and mellow as any brandy you ever tried.

Now, if only that friend of yours is also reading this ad, you'll get a bottle of Almaden Brandy for Christmas, too.

Homemade game made with string

BY CAPPY DICK

The game of "Roll-Way Mibs" is played with a marble and a game board homemade of cardboard and string. A supply of library paste also is needed.

The game board is a piece of very stiff cardboard or corrugated paper board about 15 inches square.

With a pencil and ruler,

Channel of strings

draw the outlines of a spiral channel like that in the adjoining drawing, starting near one outer corner and going around and around in a constantly diminishing course ending at the center. Make the channel one-half inch wide.

string and apply a short section of it at a time. First brush library paste on 10 or 12 inches of the string and quickly press it in place along the pencilled channel lines. Apply paste to the next 10 or 12 inch section press it in place continuing until you have outlined one side of the entire channel. Outline the other edge of the channel the same way. When the paste has dried you are ready to play the game.

Place a marble in the channel at the point marked "Start" and by manipulating the board cause it to roll along the channel all the way to the center. It's fun!

Coaching by phone

Lyle Bowers in hospital

BY DAN VANDERPAS
AND ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writers

St. John basketball Coach Lyle Bowers was confined to St. Elizabeth's hospital last Friday when the Dutchmen played at Roncalli. Bowers is undergoing a series of tests and he's not sure when he will be released permanently.

"There wasn't much I could do as far as coaching goes Friday night," he said in a phone conversation from his hospital bed Monday.

"After each quarter, Chuck Fischer, who helped out while I was gone, called me up to let me know how things were going. But it's hard to say anything when you can't see the action. I sure wish the game would have been broadcast on the radio.

"Dennis Oudenhoven, the jayvee coach, and Don Eckes, who takes care of the freshmen, ran the team, and Joe Lamers, a manager for three years, also pitched in. I could have told them what to do if we would have taken the lead, but that never happened."

"He (Bowers) really wanted to know how things were going when I called him," Fischer, the school's athletic director, said. "I think he appreciated all of the calls — except the last one," he added.

As it turned out, the Jets edged SJ, 57-55.

Saturday night, the Dutchmen hosted Fox Valley Lutheran, and Bowers was determined to be present. "My doctor gave me permission to leave hospital for a couple of hours to coach. So I got a pass and Mr. Fischer picked me up for the game and brought me back afterward.

The team's reunion with Bowers was a success as St. John beat FVL, 66-62. However, Lyle's return to the hospital prevented him from celebrating.

"FVL's free throw shooting was unreal," he said. "We had nine kids who scored, so I feel we are getting the balance we want. I just hope I can get out of this bed in time for the game at Premontre Wednesday," he concluded.

The co-runnerup Dutchmen, Premontre and Xavier boast 4-2 FVCC records, while league-leading Pennings is 6-0.

"You might as well tackle the toughest," Clintonville's Carl Bruggink said of the Truckers meeting with Pulaski tonight on the Raiders' floor.

Pulaski is the undefeated leader in the Bay Conference with a 6-0 slate, while the Truckers are out to snap a 2-game losing streak which has dropped them to 3-3.

"Our league is tough" Bruggink said, restating a comment he made early in the season. "I'm disappointed that we aren't doing quite as well as I had hoped.

"I thought we would be a little further advanced at this time, but it is difficult to play in a conference with the overall size the Bay has this season with 5-11 and 6-0 forwards.

"The good teams all have big men in the front court and big men with experience at that. There is a draw-back in playing a closed schedule if you can't get a real picture on the relative strength of teams outside your own area. We used to always schedule a couple of games with teams outside the conference — such as Green Bay and the Wisconsin River Valley — but with an 18-game conference schedule can't do that."

Bruggink added, "another part of our game, in addition to rebounding, which hasn't been as good as we want is our defense. We must improve our defense and go to the boards harder.

"We are somewhat younger than previous years but we should develop as the season wears on," he said.

Bruggink concluded, "We've lost three games to pretty tough teams but had our chances in most of them to win. Our first loss was to De Pere which was undefeated until last week. They made 38 free throws to our three. And them in another game we missed a few bunnies and lost by a couple points."

Valders (5-0) took the undisputed lead in the Olympian Conference last weekend by handing defending champ, Brillion, its first loop setback. The Lions held a 30-26 lead going into the final period, before being outpointed, 18-10.

In tonight's feature game, Denmark (3-2) invades Freedom (4-1). "This will be a pivotal game for us," Freedom Coach Jim Harke said. "We would sure like to win this one, because after Christmas, we go against another contender, Brillion. A win over Denmark would lift our morale."

Momentum edge for Bays?

BY LEE REMMEL
Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — The word "momentum," glibly tossed about by both coaches and the fourth estate for at least a decade, has become a weary cliché.

Yet, despite its shopworn condition, it remains the best choice to describe the psychic state of a team moving into the playoffs, which are now upon us.

Because said momentum is associated only with winning, an inevitable question is posed by the fact Washington has lost its last two regular season starts. That would not seem the proper kind of springboard for next Sunday's struggle with the Packers in the nation's capital.

The green and gold, presumably, would have whatever psychological edge might exist, based upon a strong, three-victory finish to the regular season.

But Dan Devine, not unexpectedly, Monday discounted the Redskins' consecutive losses to Dallas and Buffalo as a factor. And so, predictably, did the Redskins' resident genius, George Allen.

Devine, who hardly could be expected to talk otherwise, insisted, "I don't think that will have any effect on the Redskins. They didn't play Larry Brown either, did they?"

"Every game is different, so what has happened in the last two weeks has nothing to do with what will happen in Washington Sunday.

"Buffalo picked off a 43-yard interception late in the game to beat the Redskins," Devine pointed out. "and we might not do that.

"Also, some of the things that happened to them in that game aren't likely to happen again soon, just as we would anticipate some of the things that happened to us in New Orleans last Sunday wouldn't happen again. Not, at least, if I'm going to keep my sanity."

His coaching rival was in general agreement, at least officially. "I don't think those two losses will be a factor," Allen said from his Washington office Monday evening. "We have a mature football team, with a lot of solid citizens. They know what it takes.

"I repeat what I said Sunday after that loss to Buffalo. It's more important that we have everybody ready for the playoffs than it would be going down to the wire in the regular season."

Earlier this month, however, he made a point of mentioning momentum — and its value.

Last 3 games

"Three years ago, when I was with the Rams, we lost our last three games after clinching the division championship," he said at that point. "And then we lost to Minnesota in the playoff. So we want to win these last two games to keep our momentum."

The Packers' Bob Brown, who twice has been through the playoff, also underscored the importance of a winning surge into the post-season scramble while discussing the subject Monday, although he was talking in terms of the Packers' finish.

"I think it was important that we won our last three games," he said, "because it's tough to turn it on and off.

It's not like a car key. Like coach Lombardi used to say you have to have a winning habit.

"You can't say, 'This week we'll slack off and next week we'll win.' It just doesn't work that way."

Be that as it may, one thing was clearly evident on Lombardi Avenue Monday. The Packers had all but forgotten their regular-season finale in New Orleans, a 30-20 success.

"We're thinking so much of Washington," Devine confided, "that any evaluation of last Sunday's game wouldn't be much in depth because of substitutions."

As might be expected, the Packer generalissimo was generous in his praise of the Redskins, 21-16 conquerors of the green and gold in a Nov. 26 meeting.

"In general, I would say they have no weaknesses," he said. "They have a great offense, great defense and great special teams. And a great field kicker in Curt Knight. So there's no area where they are not strong.

"And in most areas, not only are they good, but they're experienced."

Taking a Washington roster in hand, he scanned it and then announced, "If I read this right, they only have two men with one year of pro experience. We have 10. And, in 2-year men, they don't have anybody on their roster and we have seven. So that's 17 to 2. Packers, in first and second year men."

Touching upon the New Orleans game, Devine said, "I would say that probably our greatest fault was lack of consistency."

Moves ball well

He noted with satisfaction, however, that the offense had moved the ball well and often in the second half, which found Jerry Tagge at the throttle.

"We had five possessions in all and the first time we got the ball, we scored," Devine said. "And the third time we got the ball, we also scored, and the fourth time.

"And the fifth time, we ran off 10 plays, moving from our 30 to their 39 when time ran out."

Commenting on Tagge's performance, Devine said, "I thought Jerry did a good job. And I thought Scott did a good job, too."

Then, addressing himself to what he knew to be a hot topic, DD declared, "To answer questions about the kicking game before they are asked, there isn't anything that happened in the area of our kicking game that can't be improved by hard work and better concentration."

The allusion, of course, was to the fact that the Packers had two field goal attempts and two punts blocked — one of the latter by their own Jim Carter unintentionally — in New Orleans.

"I don't really want to amplify much more than that," Devine said, "because there are so many details involved.

"But you can be assured considerable attention will be given to the subject this week. That comes under the hard work part."

PACKER PATTERN — The Packers were scheduled to hold their only Green Bay practice of the week at noon today, shortly before departure for Winston-Salem, N.C.

They will work out at Wake Forest, alma mater of Packer offensive backfield coach Red Cochran, in Winston-Salem for the balance of the week and fly into Washington.

Devine said a check of the casualty list revealed the Packers had emerged from the New Orleans match largely unscathed. "Keith Wortman got a little bruised knee," he said, "but he could be okay."

"He is probable and so is Tommy Joe Crutcher. Dave Davis would be doubtful at this point, but all of the rest should be ready to play."

Asked if he contemplated any personnel move prior to Sunday's game, Devine replied, "I'm giving a lot of thought to it, but haven't reached any decisions yet. I'm planning to do pretty much like we have during the regular season — defer any such moves until just before the game.

"Jon Stagers, for example, could be reactivated at any time. In fact, he probably could have played Sunday."

Khayat, Hollway get axe in NFL 'musical chairs'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While eight National Football League teams began traveling what they hope will be the road to the Super Bowl Monday, many of the others were playing the age-old game of musical chairs with their coaches.

The Philadelphia Eagles fired Ed Khayat, the St. Louis Cardinals canned Bob Hollway and there was speculation the axe might fall on J.D. Roberts of the New Orleans Saints and Tommy Prothro of the Los Angeles Rams.

Hollway

Meanwhile, the New York Giants, coming off a better-than-predicted 8-6 season, capped by Sunday's 23-3 rout of Dallas, gave Coach Alex Webster another one-year contract while his cross-town rival, 65-year-old Weeb Ewbank of the New York Jets, disclosed that 1973 would be his last season at the helm.

The firing of Khayat and Hollway left three coaching vacancies in the NFL, since Phil Bengtson was hired away from San Diego at midseason by the New England Patriots only as an interim replacement for the ousted John Mazur.

Archibald sparks Kings

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Nate Archibald, the National Basketball Association's scoring leader, poured in 30 points and added 15 assists Monday night to propel the Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 113-95 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

For Portland, it was the 11th loss in 12 outings. And for Kings' Coach Bob Cousy, it was admittedly satisfying.

"I didn't know how long it was going to take," he smiled. He noted the Kings' lukewarm shooting in the first half and said the defense got the job done until the Kings leaped to a .725 shooting percentage in the second half.

"And we started to run better as a result of the defense," Cousy said. "Portland hit a cold spell with its outside shooting, and we took the break."

The Kings trailed, 51-49 at intermission, but then caught fire. Johnny Green scored 13 of his 15 points in the final 24 minutes, Nate Williams scored all 15 of his points in the second half, and Tom Van Arsdale notched 14 of his 21 during the offensive production.

The Kings-Trail Blazers match was the only NBA game scheduled. And in the only ABA contest, Utah outslugged Dallas, 146-126.

NOTES & NOTIONS

Though the Green Bay Packers were absent from the NFL playoffs for four years, no one was able to match their dazzling accomplishments of two straight Super Bowl titles (1967 and '68). Now, the Pack is back in the thick of it with a chance to protect or even add to the enviable record — Dallas is the only team in the 1972 playoffs with a chance to equal Green Bay's 2-in-a-row record, and if the Packers should meet the Cowboys in Ice Bowl II Dec. 31, they would be in a position personally to oust Dallas. And, if the Packers could maintain their momentum and win three more games, they'll become an unprecedented 3-time Super champion.

Eight different teams have been in one or more of the six Super Bowls played to date — and this is the current standing of teams in that January classic: Green Bay, 2-0; Jets, 1-0; Baltimore, 1-1; Dallas, 1-1; Kansas City, 1-1; Miami, 0-1; Minnesota, 0-1; and Oakland, 0-1. Four of these elite eight — Green Bay, Dallas, Miami and Oakland — will be battling for encore appearances on Super Sunday.

The current eight teams represent one of the more intriguing lineups in the 7-year history of 8-club playoffs. Besides the only 2-time champion and the defending champion, the field includes Miami, which compiled the only perfect regular-season record in the NFL's post-war history. The sentimental favorites of "impartial" or "uncommitted" fans probably are Pittsburgh and Green Bay. The Steelers have just won their first division title in 40 years, and they are the only team among the quarter-finalists that has never been in the playoffs. The Packers, of course, have had a unique niche in pro football through the years with a magic name tantamount to that of Notre Dame in college football. Five of the playoff teams are repeaters from last year. They are Cleveland, Miami, San Francisco, Dallas and Washington.

Three of the coaches will try to put an end to playoff frustrations. There's Miami's Don Shula, for example, who owns the NFL's best long-term coaching percentage, yet is also the only mentor with an 0-2 record (Baltimore and Miami) in the Super Bowl. George Allen has tried to get two good clubs (Los Angeles and Washington) into the Super Bowl but has yet to accomplish it. And San Francisco's Dick Nolan will try for the third straight year to reach Super status.

Numbering the playoff teams 1 to 8, in the "most likely to succeed" order, Miami would probably get more No. 1 votes than any other team — and Cleveland looms as the likely No. 8 pick. I suspect that the teams rated closest to Miami would be Washington, Dallas and Pittsburgh. This would leave as "darkhorse" possibilities Green Bay, Oakland and San Francisco.

Since 1961, the Packers have won nine straight championship or playoff games — undoubtedly an all-time NFL record. If the current Packers extend that streak to 10 Sunday, they'll also put together a 4-game Green Bay win streak for the first time since 1967.

The Packers have generated a lot of steam for the playoff run. After posting a 4-3 first half record to establish themselves as contenders, they roared down the stretch for a 6-1 mark and the division title. It would seem that the Bays have more momentum than anyone except Miami (14 straight wins) and Oakland (six consecutive wins).

The big unknown factor is what effect a negative regular-season finish will have on Washington. The Redskins are the only one of the eight title seekers to lose their two most recent starts. Since the Redskins are such a well-seasoned team it's likely that this hard-to-pinpoint "momentum bit" won't affect them too much. Still, I believe it's preferable for a team to end the campaign on a winning note, as did the Packers — even though there were a few breakdowns (kicking game and pass defense).

I don't believe the pressure of their long win streak will have any adverse effect on the Dolphins, but they'll find the competition decidedly tougher than they've been used to. Miami's unbeaten record is noteworthy accomplishment to be sure — but I don't believe the Dolphins could have done it if they had played the schedule of some of the NFL teams. Miami didn't face a single one of the other seven playoff clubs during the regular season — and only two of its opponents (the Giants and the Chiefs) finished above .500. Admittedly, exhibition records aren't all that meaningful, but as an example of what a tougher schedule can mean, Miami lost to Detroit, Green Bay and Washington in pre-season action.

However, in all fairness to the Dolphins, they had no choice about their regular-season slate and did everything the schedule-maker asked of them. I don't know if the Dolphins can go all the way — but I believe they'll get by their first playoff foe, Cleveland. In other quarter-finals games, I'll go with the Packers over the Redskins, the Steelers over the Raiders and the Cowboys over the 49ers.

Not only have the Packers been an excellent "road" club (6-1) but they've been to Washington before and don't figure to be awed by the howling RFK Stadium crowd. Washington won the first meeting by only five points, and except for two unfortunate events (Dave Davis' dropping of a "sure" TD pass and Ken Ellis' injury), it could have gone either way. The Packers are at their peak, and the confidence they gained in the "must" wins over Detroit and Minnesota should help them immeasurably.

I was tempted to pick the 49ers on the basis of their dramatic win over Minnesota — but I can't quite believe that they can beat Dallas twice in one season or that the Cowboys will be anywhere near as bad as they were against the Giants. The Raiders are a much more experienced club than Pittsburgh, but — like the Packers — I believe the Steelers have the poise and defense to win.

Our final regular-season forecasts produced a 10-3 record (76.9 per cent), and the season's final log is 292-104-13 for 73.7 per cent.

Warrior, Gopher argument flares

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Marquette University continued grousing Monday about a ticket-office policy which is curtailing the Warrior cheering section at the University of Minnesota.

Coach Al McGuire said Minnesota's ducast shutout is particularly painful for Marquette alumni in the Minneapolis area who are unable to buy admission to the Jan. 16 basketball game between Warrior and Gopher.

"I've never run into anything like this before," he said. "I'm not worried about having our fans per se at the game to cheer for us. But I do feel a very strong obligation to our alumni."

Poll results may be gratifying, Maryland basketball Coach Lefty Driesell says, but there's no substitute for victory.

Maryland became a distant second behind powerhouse UCLA in the Associated Press college cage rankings Monday after Princeton's upset triumph over Florida State.

"Naturally I'm very happy about the poll standing but this doesn't have much to do with winning and that's the important thing we have to keep doing," Driesell said. "In fact, it may make winning a little tougher."

UCLA, 4-0, on the heels of a 98-67 romp over California-Santa Barbara, received 880 points on first-place votes from all 44 members of the nationwide panel of writers and broadcasters who vote in the poll. Maryland, 3-0, received 662 points and Marquette, 4-0, moved to third with 591.

North Carolina State, 6-0, defeated rival North Carolina 68-61, and moved to fourth. Minnesota, 4-0, assumed fifth place, Long Beach State, 4-0, was sixth and Florida State, 3-1, skidded to seventh.

Southwestern Louisiana, 6-0, was eighth followed by Indiana, 5-0, and Missouri, 7-0.

Stevens paces Tech

Unheralded QB stars

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jim Stevens, who started the 1972 season as a third-string quarterback at Georgia Tech and ended it by engineering a heart-thumping 31-30 victory Monday night over Iowa State in the Liberty Bowl, said he just hoped to be a reserve.

"I just wanted to do my job and establish myself as the No. 2 quarterback behind Eddie," Stevens said as he

Majors accepts job as Pitt grid coach

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Johnny Majors, who molded the weak Iowa State football program into respectability, faces a similar task at ailing Pitt, where he will become head coach.

Majors announced acceptance of the Pitt job after his Iowa State team lost to Georgia Tech Monday night in the undressed in Tech's steamy dressing room after the game.

Stevens, who was named the game's outstanding player for throwing three touchdown passes, was referring to Tech's regular quarterback for most of the season, Eddie McAshan, who was suspended prior to the Yellow Jackets' last game of the regular season for missing practice.

Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn.

Pitt Athletic Director Casimir Myslinski then confirmed the hiring, and announced a news conference here, with Majors attending, at 4:30 p.m. today.

"We couldn't do any better than him," said Myslinski, who three weeks ago had announced a search for a "big name coach—somebody with impact," after firing Carl DePasqua.

In Majors, Pitt got a 37-year-old coach who compiled a 24-31 mark at Iowa State in five years, including two bowl defeats.

Majors, an outstanding tailback at Tennessee in the 1950s and a charter member of the University of Tennessee Hall of Fame, was named Big Eight Conference Coach of the Year after his team compiled an 8-4 record in 1971.

After an excellent start this season, Iowa State lost its last six games, including a 31-30 loss to Georgia Tech Monday night, and finished with a 5-6-1 record.

him to provide tickets to the opposition."

"If nothing else, it is very bad public relations," Saucedo said.

"Our Minneapolis alumni group is the third or fourth biggest in the country, and we can't do a thing for them," he complained.

McGuire, whose Warriors are third-ranked nationally and face Iowa Saturday, has cooled some from a remark in which he mentioned a possibility of refusing to show up for the Minnesota game.

"At this time I don't see any cancellation," he said. "I don't have that kind of authority any way."

Giel, in a telephone interview, said there isn't much he can do about the ticket business. Minnesota's new-found basketball popularity has consumed available tickets, he said.

"We've always provided tickets in the past because we had them available," he said. "But this year, we had to leave ticket sales open for students for one full month, and they bought up 13,000 of them."

"The Big Ten rule book says you hold out 1,500 for football, but it says nothing about basketball," he said.

Marquette, a nonconference school, may have a reply which would make the Milwaukee Arena even more partisan when the Gophers visit next season.

When Giel inquires about tickets for Gopher fans in Milwaukee, Saucedo said, "obviously we won't have any for them."

"I just tried to do my best," he said. "Really, I was looking forward to next year when I knew I'd have the chance to be No. 1."

Tech, which finished 7-4-1, scored what proved to be the decisive touchdown with 11:28 left in the game on a threeyard pass from Stevens, a 6foot-1, 190-pound junior, to third-string full-back Kevin McNamara. Bobby Thigpen kicked what turned out to be the winning extra point.

But Stevens later fumbled as he pitched out, Iowa State's Larry Hunt recovered on the Tech 33 and seven plays later Cyclone quarterback George Amundson rifled a five-yard TD pass to split end Ike Harris, making the score 31-30 with 1:36.

On a two-point conversion attempt, Amundson, bothered by Tech end Beau Bruce, hurriedly threw beyond the end zone and the score stood.

Iowa State's Johnny Majors, who announced after the game he will take head coaching job at Pittsburgh, said there was never any doubt about going for two after the Cyclones' last touchdown.

"We thought it would work since Amundson's runs on the sprintout had worked and we thought the receivers would get open because they were giving him room to the outside. The receiver was covered momentarily and the rush was a little better then we had expected."

Lefebvre signs contract with club in Japan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodger second baseman Jim Lefebvre has signed a lucrative three-year contract to play for the Lotte Orions of the Japanese Baseball League, a spokesman for the club confirmed Monday.

The 29-year-old veteran, who was the National League rookie of the year in 1965, was reportedly making $40,000 with the Dodgers. Last year he played in only 70 games, most of them before the All-Star break, batting .201. The Dodgers also confirmed that his contract with the Orions would make him the highest paid player in Japanese baseball history.

The spokesman said negotiations with the popular Dodger had continued since the end of the season and the said, "Jim received an offer that was too good to turn down." The Dodgers released him and he was waived by the other American clubs.

Rapids wrestlers cop meet, Marion runnerup

MARION — Wisconsin Rapids won a 4-way wrestling meet here Saturday by winning two matches and tying one.

Marion captured second place by winning one match and tying two. Wittenberg-Birmamwood came in third with one win, one loss and one tie. Athens was squashed, losing three matches.

Wittenberg-Birmamwood grapplers had quick pins. Mike Stroik, a 12-second pin, John Wierzb, a 33-second pin, Bill Schmidt a 56-second pin, and Rich Carleson had a 59-second pin.

Marion's Randy Lorenz had a 53-second pin.

By SPENCER DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — By resuming the intensified bombing of North Vietnam, President Nixon has turned back the diplomatic clock by eight months.

The White House said Monday the Vietnam peace talks are "still wide open." But it was also made clear that bombing will continue north of the 20th parallel of North Vietnam "until such time as a settlement is arrived at."

Last May 8, Nixon announced that North Vietnamese ports would be mined and rail and communication lines leading from China would be heavily bombed.

As the secret peace talks between presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho seemed to make some progress, Nixon ordered the bombing cut back below the 20th parallel, still in North Vietnam, but close to the border with South Vietnam.

The effect of Monday's announcement then is to move the U.S. position back to May when Nixon said

the talks in Paris had drawn from the North Vietnamese only "bombastic rhetoric and a replaying of their demand for surrender."

Then, as now, the public defense of the bombing was presented as a means of saving the lives of U.S. pilots and other Americans still in Vietnam. White

A news analysis

House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Monday, "We will not let peace talks be used as a cover for another Communist offensive."

Nevertheless, diplomatic sources do not believe that the U.S. talks with Hanoi are completely washed out or broken down beyond repair. They use the term suspension rather than breakdown.

But it appears clear that the same issue which has always dogged the peace talks has again blocked efforts to agree on a way to end to the fighting: the political future of South Vietnam.

In the agreement that Kissinger and Tho were preparing, for example, the future role of the demilitarized zone at the 17th parallel, the future of North Vietnamese troops in the South, the infiltration of the South, the sovereignty of the Saigon government below the 17th parallel and the diplomatic standing of South Vietnam in the world were all issues.

According to the South Vietnamese these issues might have been papered over, but it would not have resulted in a real or lasting solution to the Indochina conflict.

Sen. George McGovern hit upon the political issue in criticizing the bombing renewal as evidence the administration "is chained to a government in South Vietnam that is determined to sabotage any chance for peace."

McGovern, the defeated Democratic presidential candidate, said the bombing could only make the North Vietnamese more determined to keep fighting.

Some diplomatic sources took issue with that view, saying it was the increased military pressure which first drove the North Vietnamese to relax their demands somewhat in the talks with Kissinger.

Both McGovern and the National League of Families of Prisoners of War said Kissinger and Nixon had raised false hopes for saying "peace is at hand," a remark Kissinger made Oct. 26 when a cease-fire agreement seemed near.

Noting hopes had been raised that some prisoners would be home by Christmas, the League said, "It is a bitter prospect and the disappointments and frustrations are severe."

Word of the impasse was being carried to Indochina by Kissinger's top assistant Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. who arrived in Saigon Tuesday.

After briefing South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, Haig was scheduled to travel to Cambodia, Laos and Thailand for meetings with leaders in those countries.

U.S. B52s lost during bomb raids

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. planes made the heaviest attack to date on the Hanoi-Haiphong area during the night, but it also was costliest to the United States.

The U.S. Command reported two B52 heavy bombers and an F111 fighter-bomber lost and eight American fliers missing. Hanoi said six of the missing men — the crew of one of the B52s — were captured and presented at a news conference in the North Vietnamese capital a few hours later.

Seven other American airmen were rescued in Thailand, the U.S. Command said.

North Vietnam charged that nearly 100 civilians were killed or wounded in attacks on Hanoi and its suburbs. But it said President Nixon's attempt to bomb it into submission would not force it to accept his peace terms.

Hanoi claimed that three B52s and three fighter-bombers were shot down and aid a number of the fliers were captured. The U.S. Command said it had no additional losses to report for the time being, leaving open the possibility that other American planes may have been lost but the search for the crewmen is still under way.

It was the heaviest one-day loss in men and material that the United States has suffered in the air war. The two B52s and the F111 cost a total of $31 million.

A total of 14 B52s now have been lost during the 7½ years America's biggest bombers have been flying in the Vietnam war, but only one of them previously was downed by enemy fire, on Nov. 23.

Although the U.S. Command withheld most information about the resumption of the air war north of the 20th parallel, one senior American official said hundreds of planes took part in the raids, and some targets in the Hanoi-Haiphong industrial complex were hit for the first time in the war.

There were indications that more than 100 B52s, or most of those available, were used. For the first time in memory, the U.S. Command today gave no information on B52 strikes in South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. A spokesman refused to say whether this meant the entire force had been shifted to the attack on North Vietnam.

The U.S. Command also reported less than 200 U.S. fighter-bomber strikes in South Vietnam Monday, about half as many as usually are flown. This indicated a major diversion of the smaller aircraft also to the attack in the North.

Authoritative sources reported a fifth aircraft carrier was operating in the Tonkin Gulf, in addition to the four normally there. This increased the fighter-bomber force further.

Military sources said President Nixon had ordered the shutdown on official information about the attacks.

"We never have been under such tight restrictions," said one experienced officer in the U.S. Command.

The Command did announce that U.S. Navy ships had resumed surface gunfire attacks north of the 20th parallel but gave no details.

Lips, pig snouts may be banned in wieners

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal meat standards will be proposed soon which will ban from hot dogs such things as beef lips, pork snouts, hearts and tongues, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

Those items, plus others such as spleens, tripe and pig stomachs, are allowed to be ground up and used in frankfurters, bologna and other cooked sausages.

But Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Lyng said "it's time to consider taking meat by-products out of frankfurters," although the snouts, lips and other items are considered nutritious and wholesome.

Federal rules do not allow animal eyeballs, ears and lungs in hot dogs, a spokesman added.

Not all hot dogs use the byproducts and those which do must list the items on package labels.

Officials said the tighter meat regulation will be proposed soon and that it will be open to comment from the meat industry and the public for 60 days before final action is taken.

Meantime, a legal tutor in Michigan over animal by-products in hot dogs has been carried to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Michigan state rules prohibit animal by-products in hot dogs which currently are allowed by the federal government.

Apollo 17 perfectly aimed for splashdown

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The homeward bound men of the last Apollo fired a brief burst from two rocket thrusters today to perfectly aim their spacecraft toward splashdown.

"The burn was right on the money," reported Apollo 17 commander Eugene A. Cernan after the nine-second firing.

It put him, Harrison H. Schmitt and Ronald E. Evans on target for a 4:24 p.m. EST arrival in the South Pacific seas, 400 miles southeast of Samoa.

Waiting on station in the Pacific was the primary recovery ship, the USS Ticonderoga. The carrier reported weather in the area was near-perfect for the homecoming, with only high, scattered clouds and gentle seas.

Apollo 17 is the final flight in a $25 billion program created to boost American prestige and carried out as a scientific exploration for all men. The program ends three years, five months after first putting 20th century man on the moon.

Aboard the command ship America, of the last moon mission is a record cargo of moon samples, more than 3,000 pictures taken on the moon and about two miles of film taken from moon orbit. Also on board are samples of an orange dust which scientists say may revolutionize thinking about lunar evolution.

Helicopters aboard the carrier were prepared to hover over the Apollo 17 command ship, America, after it blazes through the atmosphere and then floats to a splashdown under three huge parachutes. The spacemen were to be plucked from a life raft and taken to the ship for a red-carpet, brass hat welcome.

Mission Control told the spacemen that a small rocket firing would be needed at 10:11 a.m. to more perfectly aim the spacecraft at its planned splashdown point.

The astronauts awoke from their last night in space to the music "Anchors Aweigh" and the "Star Spangled Banner." Mission Control played the music twice and the crew of America stirred awake at 7:03 a.m., 10 minutes behind schedule.

"Hey, Houston," said Evans, a Navy commander and a veteran of shipboard wake-up calls. "That's mighty fine."

"We are ready to have you come home today," said Mission Control.

"We're all set, too," said Evans. "We've been waiting a long time for 'Anchors Aweigh' — and we missed it."

The Navy music was played again as the crew began breakfast.

Cernan, the mission commander, later looked out a spacecraft window at earth and said, "We're looking at our big smiling crescent. How beautiful is it?"

"You're just passing the 40,000-mile mark," he was told.

Forty thousand miles separated Cernan with wonder. "That's...

On their last night in space, the spacemen held a televised row of questions, answering 13 questions from a panel of reporters in Mission Control. During the program, Evans said he was "in good luck" on the moon, to the surprise of his family, and increased the number of his lunar photographs from 10 to 12.

Truman is more alert

KANSAS CITY, AP — Former president Harry S. Truman remained in very serious condition today, but a hospital spokesman said he seemed more alert after spending a restful night.

John Dreyer, hospital spokesman, said Truman "follows peoples' movement with his eyes, but has not spoken to them."

Kidney output had increased during the past 24 hours, but remained inadequate, Dreyer said.

War has done little to change Vietnam

BY WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Looking at the Vietnam situation before an expected ceasefire, an American might well conclude: in some ways this is just about where the United States came in, where it all began years ago.

As for the South Vietnamese, they face the melancholy possibility that they are in for a replay of some of what happened to them in the early stages of their fratricidal conflict.

investment approaching $200 billion, widespread ruin in Indochina and 4½ frustrating years of Paris talks.

The Saigon regime today controls most of South Vietnam's population, but in terms of geography there is not too much difference between today's map of who holds what and that of 1954. Much of the territory must be marked as contested, but dug-in Communists control many of the same areas the Vietminh held when the French were being driven out 18 years ago.

When France was being humiliated, a map showed the Vietminh of Communist Ho Chi Minh controlling — apart from practically all Tonkin in the north

— most of Annam's rural areas from Quang Tri Province down into the central areas, patches of territory along the Cambodian border, large areas of Cochinchina in the extreme south and much of northern Laos.

Today's map would show North Vietnamese and Viet Cong controlling a big area of Quang Tri, patches of territory in the center where much real estate remains contested, and areas along the Cambodian border, along with part of Cambodia and much of northern Laos.

In 1954 the Vietminh controlled much of the South outside town and city

population centers. What it didn't hold was under the sway of armed religious sects. Today, Communist-held areas are sparsely populated, containing perhaps 10 per cent of the people.

Intelligence sources suggest that the North Vietnamese plan to leave thousands of their troops in the South to merge with the Viet Cong. This recalls a situation that existed in 1954 after the Geneva settlement that divided Vietnam. Hanoi ordered 100,000 Vietminh into the North, but left a tough hard core of 6,000 south of the 17th Parallel to merge with the peasants and hide their ties, preparing for the next phase of liberation.

Hanoi's needed reinforcements, however, under the Eisenhower administration, were not sent. Hanoi must recover from some of the scars of war against Southern Vietnam, forces from the North to South, and bombing and all the rest.

In May, January 1961, before the guerrillas mounted their major drive in the South, last time. They moved in immediately after a Hanoi announcement proclaimed the existence of a "National Liberation Front."

This time, if the front should choose to launch a new campaign of attrition

Charity Ball in season's spotlight

Exchanging greetings

Mr. and Mrs. William Buchanan and Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Purdy pause on the dance floor to exchange greetings at the 40th annual Charity Ball.

One of the highlights of this year's Charity Ball sponsored by the Infant Welfare Circle of The King's Daughters was a huge birthday cake which was served after dinner in celebration of the ball's 40th birthday. Since 1929 these lovely events have helped provide funds for the continued support of the charitable works of the circle through the Infant Welfare Foundation of the King's Daughters of Appleton.

Saturday evening's gala held in the beautiful setting that is North Shore Gold Club, provided guests with dinner if they chose, dancing to excellent music and the opportunity for camaraderie with old and new friends.

Waupaca to have alcoholism center

BY FERN SMITH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WAUPACA — An office will be opened in Waupaca County by mid January to provide services for the estimated 1,200 residents who are suffering from alcoholism, it was disclosed today by the Waupaca County Alcohol and Drug Abuse Resource Council which has received a $15,000 federal grant for the first year's operation.

"We have a number of people to thank for making it possible to get a program under way," Lloyd Matheson, council president, said. "For more than three years a number of educators, doctors, law enforcement officers, ministers, social workers and interested citizens have worked within the council to identify the need for such an agency."

"Volunteers have worked tirelessly the past year and a half to help the alcoholic and other drug user as they asked for help, or were referred by their doctor, employer, or the courts," Matheson continued. "Existing health and social agencies have been cooperative and the schools have given us many opportunities to present programs on alcoholism, 'the hidden disease'."

"It did not take us very long to discover that the problems and the needs far exceeded our voluntary efforts and that continuing to grow like Topsy was not even a token attack on this illness which affects not only the problem drinker but his family and his employer," he said.

"Now we will open a central office staffed by a full time counselor coordinator, experienced in the drug field," Matheson said. "We expect to advertise for a person to fill the position the first of the year, and from what I am told about the number of applicants for such posts by other agencies throughout the state, we will lose very little time finding the proper person."

"Our board has set a four-pronged goal to educate the community (Waupaca County) on alcoholism, assist all agencies and the courts with identifying the alcoholics, referring the person to proper treatment and following this up with counseling and rehabilitation for the alcoholic and his or her family," Matheson explained.

"By drawing together all of the existing facilities in the county providing in service programs and educational programs, working cooperatively we feel that we can reduce the suffering, the hazard, the economic loss which confronts the person whose drinking is out of control," he said.

"Simply put we want to pull this disease from its hiding place, bring it out into the open where it can be treated effectively," Matheson concluded. "We are not on a witch hunt, not a bunch of prohibitionists. An alcoholic is a sick person and needs to be treated medically, not thrown in the drunk tank. We want to use all of our resources in Waupaca County to bring about the kind of understanding and cooperation that will bring help to those who need it."

Waupaca County was one of 30 county and community agencies which applied for a share of the $566,909 allocated to the State of Wisconsin under the Hughes Act. The funds were granted by the State Advisory Council on Alcoholism earlier this month, primarily to expand community based alcoholism services.

To date persons needing medical treatment for alcoholism have been referred in a hit and miss fashion through the courts to Winnebago State Hospital, through Veterans Service to the alcoholism treatment unit at Tomah, or by private physicians to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Appleton, Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah or special private treatment sanatoria.

A majority of those referred have returned to their homes to eventually go through the revolving door a second and third time. This is one of the things we will work to change, a council spokesman said.

Work-study program working

NEW LONDON — Four members of the special education class at Washington Junior High School here are involved in an on-the-job training program that aids their learning process while enabling them to develop valuable work skills and habits.

While there are 15 students in Georgia Dobberstein's special education class, the program, which is funded by the state Department of Health and Social Services, through the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, is limited to students 16-18 years old. Mrs. Dobberstein said that four more students will be able to participate in the program next year, when they turn 16.

Under the program, which was started here in October, the students work mornings for 75 cents an hour, and attend classes in the afternoon.

Guidance counselor Tom Schmitt and Mrs. Dobberstein said that classroom work is more relevant, and interesting, for the students who are in the program. Schmitt said that the program "provides a work experience for the students who would normally have a hard time finding a job," and that the participants are evaluated bimonthly by the school and their employers.

And since the students have started work, Mrs. Dobberstein has helped them open savings and checking accounts at the two local banks, and has helped them devise budgets. She said the students seem to be "very happy" about earning money and some degree of independence.

While the students' fellow workers and employers help them, Mrs. Dobberstein also discusses situations that could occur at work with the students.

"It's a training program — and they come back to school in the afternoon," she added. The younger students, who can not yet participate in the training, look forward to when they will be able to work parttime, she said.

Mrs. Dobberstein added that the two year program is designed "to give them work experience, establish skills they have and help them develop good work habits."

With the experience and the cooperation the students have received from their employers, they may learn enough so the employer will hire them when they are out of school, she said. She added that the students are learning habits, manners and experience they will also help them get other jobs in the future.

Students employed at the four businesses, Gabriel's New London Floral, New London Community Hospital, the Weber Medical Clinic and the junior high, are also now showing more initiative and can accept more responsibility, she added.

"It's done them a world of good — it gives them a new self-concept," she said, "to be among new people and make their own way and make their own friends."

The students are rated on attitude which includes initiative, cooperation, motivation, and conduct, appearance, including hygiene and appearance, and work habits, which include organization, safety consciousness, attendance, punctuality, quality of work, working with other employees and supervisors following instructions, job knowledge and the keeping of job records.

Open house set at day center for psychiatric care

Outagamie County's community approach to psychiatric treatment — Portal House Day Center — will be open to the public Thursday for tours and explanations of the program.

David Sharpe, program director, said group members would conduct the tours, answer questions and serve refreshments made at the center during the open house from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The county owned house at 411 W. Sixth St. provides psychiatric treatment for county residents right in the community, away from an institution. Members attend the center for eight hours two, three, four or five days a week depending on the amount of treatment they need. They spend the remainder of the day at home coping with family situations and making daily decisions as a part of the therapy program. Sixteen members are being treated at the center now, Sharpe said. The center is not open weekends or evenings.

Staff members are Walt Moser, certified occupational therapy assistant, Diane Ware, nursing assistant, and Mrs. Sharon Sullivan, receptionist/secretary.

Juvenile home could be used by older youths

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Outagamie County's Juvenile Receiving Home might be used only to house youngsters over 13 years old if the state approves and if new 'parents' can be found.

The future of the home, which has operated off and on since 1967, appeared uncertain after Mr. and Mrs. Paul Young said two weeks ago they will quit as operators March 1. The receiving home is in a county owned building at 523 S. Walnut St.

County Welfare Director James E. Stampf told his Board of Social Services that because of the tremendous demands on the receiving home parents he had little hopes of finding replacements for the Youngs.

The situation was further complicated by the possibility that the state might not release the present home primarily because there is not enough playground space. What was supposed to be a playground was blacktopped and used for a courthouse area parking lot.

For the past two years Stampf told his board Monday night the home has been permitted to operate under a provisional license from the state. He said he has learned informally that the state would not issue a new license which would be necessary before the home could be operated under new parents.

Stampf said he now is thinking of placing children under 13 in a network of emergency foster homes that would be developed. Children 13 to 18 years old would continue to use the receiving home.

Use of the home for older children might be a way of skirting the state's licensing objections. Stampf explained. Large playground space is not so essential for older children, he said.

The receiving home was intended for use as an emergency and temporary care unit for children who are abused, neglected or dependent. However, it also has come to be used as a shelter care facility for juvenile offenders who need minimum custody.

The Youngs lease the three story home from the county and are under contract with the Department of Social Services to provide care for children who are placed there.

Stampf said he is continuing to seek replacement parents and will maintain contact with the state regarding licensing.

Two weeks ago when Stampf informed the board that the Youngs were resigning, he suggested the county look into using part of the County Health Center for a non-secure juvenile facility.

However, some members of the social services board objected to abandoning the receiving home in which the county has an investment of more than $30,000.

In other action, the social services board commended Martin L. Downs for his efforts as chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Social Services. The committee appointed a year ago is an research and advisory arm of Stampf's department.

St. John's fate hinges on vote

LITTLE CHUTE — The results of the voting last weekend on the regionalization of St. John High School have not yet been tabulated.

Parishioners from area churches were asked to vote yes or no to the statement, "I believe that our parish should participate in support of St. John as a regional school."

The seven parishes involved are St. Aloysius, St. Mary and Holy Cross, Kaukauna, St. Paul, Combined Locks, Holy Name, Kimberly, Holy Angels, Darboy, and St. John.

The Catholic diocese board of education will review the figures at its meeting this afternoon in Green Bay. If the votes are not counted by then, an ad hoc committee from the board will work on the regionalization question in the interim before the next board meeting.

The decision to close the school or to operate it under an alternate financial plan will be made by the board of education, and ultimately by Bishop Aloysius Wycislo.

The other Catholic high schools in the diocese are supported by groups of parishes, but St. John has been financed solely by the Little Chute parish.

The voting this weekend followed the wishes of St. John parishioners and church boards to discontinue single parish support. The diocesan board of education attempted to organize a regional school board for St. John, and when several parishes refused to join finally set up the balloting.

The ballots were being counted this morning at some of the parishes. Other parishes had counted their votes and were waiting to turn them in to the Rev. Mark Schommer, diocesan superintendent of schools. Schommer said he thought that the results would be tabulated locally.

The vote sought to determine whether the parishes wished to commit some money to St. John. If the result favors regionalization, Schommer said, a school support formula would be weighed so that the initial contributions from surrounding parishes would be small, because most of the students now are from St. John parish.

Several of the factors which influence school aid formulas are in individual parish income, sizes of parishes, and numbers of students at the high school. Schommer said if the vote is negative the board might decide to operate St. John as a private school, or it might close the school.

K-C gives LU $100,000

Kimberly Clark Corp., Neenah, has put Lawrence University $100,000 nearer its goal of $10 million for endowment and physical improvements.

Kimberly-Clark's gift was announced today by Frederic O. Leech, chairman of the Lawrence board of trustees, and George Banta III, general chairman of the Lawrence Leadership Fund, the name given to the university's nationwide capital campaign.

J. J. Shipman, Kimberly Clark vice president for public interest and affairs, presented a check for $100,000 to Dr. Thomas S. Smith, Lawrence University president. Shipman cited the company's long association with Lawrence and expressed hope that the gift would set an example for others.

"Kimberly-Clark and Lawrence have been friends and neighbors for more than 100 years," Shipman said. "For us, this has meant that alumni of the university have contributed much as members of the company's management. For you, it has encouraged participation by Kimberly Clark people in university affairs."

"Symbolically, this gift recognizes that higher education is fundamentally important to business. We hope it will prove an incentive for your other neighbors to similarly share in Lawrence's future and perhaps provide an example for other business and academic friends and neighbors in communities everywhere."

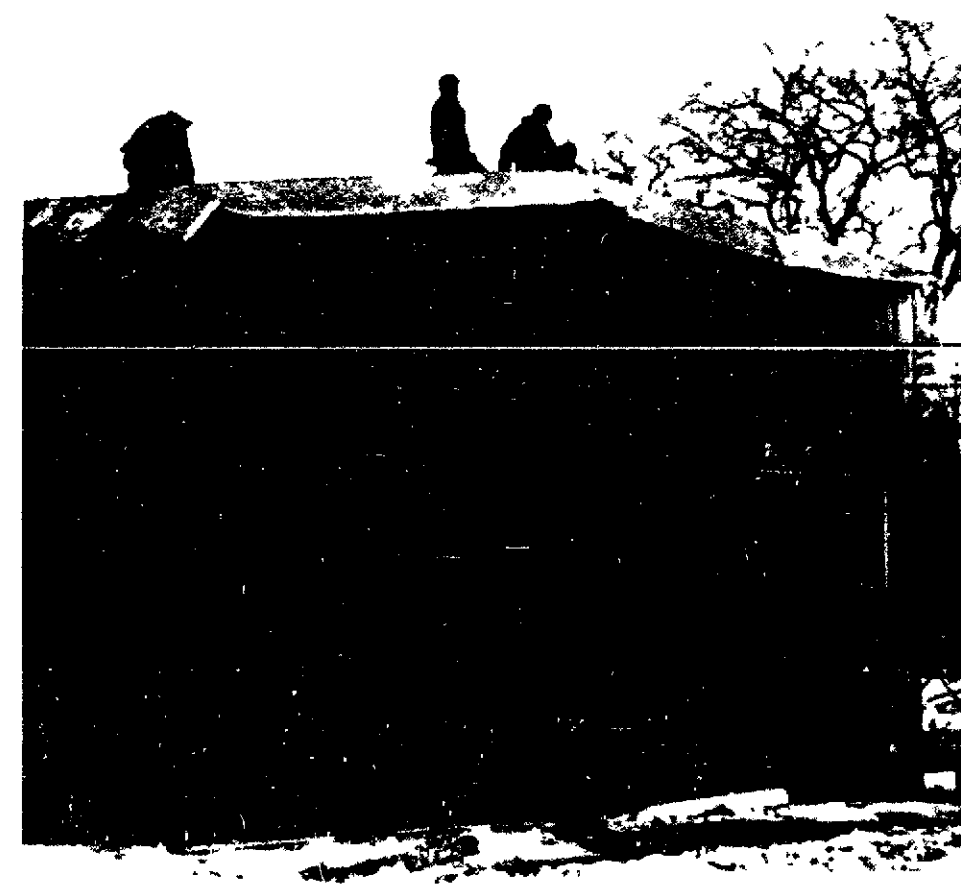

In his response, Smith said:

On behalf of the Lawrence University community, I wish to express our deep appreciation to Kimberly Clark for this most generous gift. During the past century, Kimberly Clark and Lawrence University have been neighbors in the Fox Valley, and throughout that time, Lawrence has derived much of its strength from the strength of Kimberly Clark.

"Support of independent private higher education by independent industries of our free enterprise system is essential to the freedom of both. We thank Kimberly Clark for doing more than its share in general and particularly for helping Lawrence University."

One present and one former Kimberly Clark executive serve on the university's 40 member board of trustees. They are Harry J. Sherman, executive vice president, and William M. Wright, retired vice president and director.

Of the $10 million to be raised in Lawrence's campaign, $3.75 million will be used for a new library, $3.5 million for endowment, $625,000 each for expansion of the Worcester Art Center and an addition to Yonchuld Hall of Science, $500,000 for renovation of 119-year-old Main Hall, $750,000 for renovation of other buildings, and $250,000 for land acquisition.

Topless dairy bars next?

The United States Supreme Court avoided the increasingly difficult question of obscenity and First Amendment rights in its decision that certain sexually aimed entertainment may be prohibited in places where liquor is sold.

The court cited the 21st Amendment which, in repealing the 18th, gave the states wide powers in regulating the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages. But in prohibiting something which courts have held are protected by the First Amendment, the high court seemed to be asking for trouble.

Citing statistics, the decision said that the "sale of liquor by the drink, and lewd or naked dancing and entertainment should not take place simultaneously." While it is yet to be proved that such activities increase the chances of rape or similar violence, figures produced by the California Department of Alcoholic Beverages showed evidence that prostitution and sexual indecencies did take place near such bars. But could not states then bar racially or sexually mixed bars on the same grounds? In fact, if carried to a ridiculous conclusion, it could be shown that there was no trouble at all if liquor were available for sale only in places where no one was allowed.

The decision does hark back to earlier rulings about constitutional rights. Americans have the constitutional right of freedom of speech but not necessarily that of occupations. There was a Supreme Court case regarding that of a chatty policeman. The same might be held in the wide-ranging dispute over academic freedom. Certainly it is involved in cases of those in sensitive areas of government who are, for instance, homosexuals and therefore open to the pressures of exposure.

Except in major cities where pornographic movies, peep shows and sexually oriented live shows are commonplace, the uninhibiting influence of alcohol — or the still illegal marijuana or other drugs — is generally needed to attract much of an audience. This seems likely to change as urban habits spread out to the countryside. Maybe that will be a boost for dairy bars or, as one topless San Francisco dancer-bar operator shrugged, "we'll serve fruit juice and nuts."

But the Supreme Court has yet to determine whether the First Amendment freedom of speech clause is absolute. The signs are that the justices can't decide.

Are you the first to know?

There may be a self-reliant trend toward do-it-yourself techniques in a number of areas. But as far as pregnancy tests are concerned, the Food and Drug Administration has indirectly recommended that women see their doctors.

Kits for pregnancy detection put out by two different companies are being recalled from the market because the FDA has found that they are highly unreliable. The agency reported that one failed to detect pregnancy in three of four women who were pregnant. Misleading directions may be part of the problem, according to an FDA spokesman.

There appears to be lack of knowledge about the number of such kits in circulation. One company official said that only about 40,000 of the kits had been manufactured in the last six months but the FDA put the number as high as 165,000. The kits are being recalled by the company at the request of the FDA.

However, there is at least a procedural and perhaps a legal issue. One company is questioning the right of the agency to act in any way against the product since it is not a drug. Its effect, if any, is upon the attitude of the woman involved or others of her family if she believes she is or is not pregnant and the opposite is true. Obviously this comes into the "iffy" category. What one persuades another to think and how is difficult to determine and not usually in the realm of state control. Any harm to the individual would be the result of an erroneous opinion. In a way it seems related to the quack medicine situation where one is persuaded there is a miraculous cure in an innocuous concoction.

Last spring the United States Attorney's office in New Jersey seized 8,000 detection kits on grounds of their unreliability. The company is contesting the action. Court results should direct the course of agency actions in the future.

In the meantime women who have relied upon one company's encouragement to use the kits "when you want to be the first to know" may find out that they are practically the last.

Ireland is changing

The vote in Ireland to rescind that part of the constitution of the Republic which gives to the Roman Catholic church a "special position" was overwhelmingly in favor of the change. But the vote was light.

The results indicated several things. First, the Irish no longer feel it is necessary to put the religious allegiance of the great majority of the population under government protective devices which understandably developed after the centuries of attack upon the Roman Catholic Church and its members. Secondly, they appear to be leaning away from other church directed regulations in the framework of government. And third, and most important at this time, they do not in any measure back the Irish Republican Army, either the Marxist wing or the terrorist Provincials. They are more interested in becoming regular members of the European Economic Community instead of reliving old battles and opening old wounds.

The Irish still have laws against divorce and birth control and state censorship of films and reading material that can be strict depending upon how it is regulated. It has such restrictions as prohibitions of the adoption of children by couples in mixed religious marriages and even the manufacture and import of the contraceptive pill is outlawed although it can be prescribed for non-contraceptive purposes. The referendum about the church's special position indicates a softer line in the future toward such legislation. As economic policies dictate, the attitudes may be expected to change. Isolated for so many years from Europe by its hatred of England, Ireland now seems destined to change.

Most heartening was the vote as a sign of the withdrawal of support for the I.R.A. The latter has held a paramount spot in the sentimental Irish heart. It was the staunch opponent of the Black and Tans and the inheritor of the mantles of all the Irish heroes from Tone and Emmett to Pearse and O'Connell. Approval of the I.R.A. and whatever mischief it was engendering was a knee-jerk reaction for most Irish. But that was before terrorism erupted so violently in Ulster and spread recently to Dublin. It was before the ties of the I.R.A. to Libyan Moslems and Cuban and Chinese atheists became common knowledge. The continued violence in the North threatens a settlement that would benefit Northern Catholics and disrupts the economy of the Republic. The tacit support for the I.R.A. has disappeared south of the border.

The country is a long way from ending partition. But at least some of the old, outworn hatreds are being displaced.

Every political body has ham quotient

MADISON — Old friend Frank Nikolay, lawyer and entrepreneur up Colby way in Clark County, was once one of the leading members of the state legislature. He has dispatched a gentle reprimand about the recent suggestion here that the new legislature that will soon convene may be disposed to waste less time in aimless floor "debates."

The suggestion was also offered that it could usefully devote more time and thought to serious argument, exposition and elucidation of the issues that will confront it in abundant variety.

Nikolay is former State Rep. Nikolay, who once held a responsible leadership position in the Assembly. His acquaintance in that house, he reminds, dates back nearly 30 years to the time when he found a place on the Assembly's clerical payroll to soften the financial strain of his law school studies.

He asserts with his usual vigor and conviction that his memory does not square with mine that in earlier times floor discussions were more informative, responsible, careful and serious. No doubt he is too polite to say it directly, but he implies that I am the victim of the nostalgic memories of lost youth.

He may be right

He is entitled to the candid response that he may be right. Felicitous speech is tested in the ear of the listener, and especially the involuntary listener that this correspondent was for some time before Nikolay started to law school. Yet memory plays tricks.

It may be that the bucolic cub who haunted legislative chambers in the 1930s was more impressionable than the proprietor of this report who has observed and heard 500 or more of the legislators of this sovereign and proud state in the intervening years.

But the purpose of the original comment was not critical in the punitive sense. It was to recall that in earlier times legislators tended to regard their individual responsibility more seriously.

Floorleaders were what the honorific suggests. They led. They were expected not only to know the rulebook, but to speak for their respective parties' point of view. They were expected to be prepared, lucid and persuasive, to anticipate and to rebut the argument and strategical maneuvers of the opposition.

Committee chairmen were men of rank, respect and earned distinction. They were expected to steer their committee reports, to explain them, defend them, document them.

Now too often they are mere signal callers, even as the quarterback merely receives, too often, the plays called on the bench. The bench in the Capitol is the caucus. Committee chairmen are scarcely recognized outside their committee rooms, where they are gavel holders and exult in such little boons as private offices and secretaries. They too are victims of the extreme reliance on the caucus — where individual personalities as well as the cause of public information are subordinated to party discipline.

Friend Nikolay recites — and this report will be mercifully silent about identities — examples of boring, irrelevant, ego-serving performers in the legislature of his experience. But this is the price of admission to representative government. Every political body has its ham quotient.

What he does not acknowledge, perhaps in deference to his own high profession, is that the increasing ratio of lawyers in the legislature has brought no audible improvement of the quality of its deliberations.

Himself of course excepted, lawyers too often appear intent on demonstrating that they can get on their feet and occupy time while they fumble as they contrive something to say. The uncertified often performs more effectively because he thinks of what he wants to say before he rises — which is not only more efficient but more respectful.

But be of good cheer, friend Frank, there is a chance, truly, that the legislative dialog will be improved. The sheer weight of circumstance compels it.

One of the most popular word quizzes, a few months ago, was the list dealing with differences between allied words, like "flotsam" and "jetsam." Here's another of the same; half right is a fine score.

1. Although a crow and a raven belong to the same genus, Corvus, what is the difference between them?
2. What is the relationship between concrete and cement?
3. How does a hare differ from a rabbit?
4. When is something practical, and when is it practicable?
5. What is the difference between denying and refuting?
6. How is a dilemma distinguished from a difficulty?
7. Is there a substantial difference between waste and wastage?
8. In medical diagnosis, how does a sign differ from a symptom?
9. How do historic and economic differ from historical and economical?
10. What is the relationship between factitious and fictitious?

ANSWERS:

1. The raven is the largest member of the crow family, and has by far the greatest range.
2. Cement is a building material of lime, silica, etc., heated and ground to a fine powder, then mixed with water, crushed stone, sand and gravel, to form concrete.
3. A hare has longer ears, larger hind feet, and longer legs for jumping than a rabbit.

4. Practical means adapted to actual conditions; practicable means capable of being effected or accomplished.

5. Anyone can deny, but you can refute only by producing evidence.

6. A dilemma is a particular kind of difficulty, involving only two choices of equal unfavorability.

7. Waste is whatever isn't used; wastage is loss by deterioration, wear, destruction, or the like.

8. Properly speaking, a sign is what the doctor can detect, while a symptom is what the patient feels.

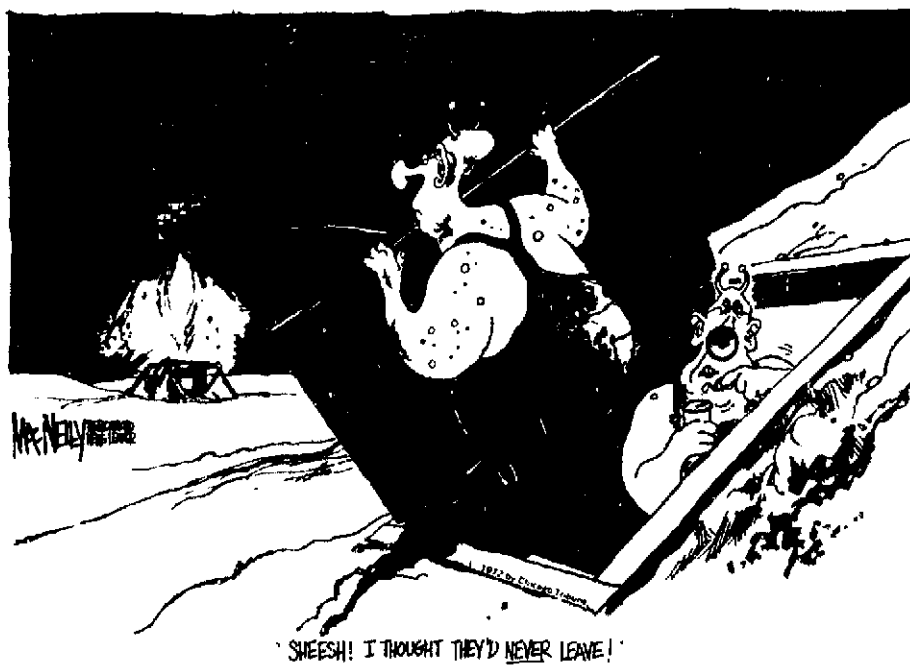

9. Historic means memorable, and historical means a part of history; economic means pertaining to the laws of economics, and economical means prudent and extravagant.

10. Whatever is produced by artificial, as opposed to natural, means is factitious; whatever is made up as an untruth is fictitious; something fictitious is always false, but a factitious object may be genuine.

Peace hang-up easy to spot

PARIS — The suspended state of the Vietnam peace talks here in Paris underlines a curious deficiency in the present management of American foreign policy. Washington can negotiate effectively with dictatorial regimes — notably in Russia, China and North Vietnam.

But serious problems crop up when negotiations engage leaders who have to refer their decisions to a broader public. That category includes the leaders of Japan and Western Europe, of course. It also includes — like him or not — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

The present difficulty in the Paris talks is easy to identify. Washington and Hanoi have negotiated an agreement which compromises the sovereignty of South Vietnam and its local allies. There is no provision in the agreement for full withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from South Vietnam. There is no reliable provision for withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and Laos.

Wants total victory

Saigon has dug in hard against these features of the agreement. President Thieu has insisted that the United States insert into the agreement clauses that amount to an underwriting of the sovereign independence of South Vietnam as a national state — in other words a total victory at the peace table.

The American negotiators here in Paris have, not surprisingly, been angered by Saigon's stand. The U.S. delegation here points out that every American proposal for peace in Vietnam since May 1970 has accepted the presence of North Vietnamese troops in South Vietnam. All of these offers, it is asserted by American officials, were previously cleared with President Thieu.

It is further asserted that, even if the kind of clauses Saigon now demands were added to the agreement, there would be no way of enforcing them. Thus it appears to the American negotiators here that President Thieu is in fact acting to scuttle the agreement worked out so painfully between Washington and Hanoi.

I have no doubt that the complaints lodged against President Thieu are well-founded. He has always been a tough customer, and in the past he has had his way when he stuck to his guns. Great pressure will probably have to be brought to get him to go along with the agreement. For my own part, I have no doubt that such pressure should be applied — and the sooner the better.

Moved quite rapidly

But the hassle with General Thieu has a wider significance. The fact is that the peace agreement was negotiated in a very special way. The accord was reached at the highest levels, in secret talks that moved, at the end at least, far more rapidly than anybody involved believed possible.

President Thieu is not a leader in good position to go along automatically with a decision of that kind. His regime may not offer the world's leading example of government by consent. Still he does have to clear decisions with an administration in Saigon, and with the generals commanding the regional forces that control South Vietnam administratively. Given the way the agreement was concluded, it was inevitable, even if illogical, that General Thieu would put up significant resistance.

The point of all this is that Washington has probably now gone about as far as it can with the style of diplomacy which characterized President Nixon's first term. There is increasingly less room left for big deals done secretly and swiftly at the highest levels by leaders who can deliver their countries. The string is running out on the kind of thing Mr. Nixon, working with Henry Kissinger, negotiated with Chou En-lai and Leonid Brezhnev and Le Duc Thu of North Vietnam.

Once Vietnam is settled, the most important international business will involve leaders who can't deliver in the fashion of the Communist bosses. It will center on the West Europeans and the Japanese. Those dealings will require a different pace and style. Thus it is no more than pious sentimentality to talk about institutionalizing the role played up to now, with such individual virtuosity, by Dr. Kissinger.

Looking back Editor gets news from Cicero town

100 YEARS AGO

Appleton Post, Dec. 12, 1872.

News resources are rather limited in a newly settled country such as Cicero, as might be expected.

The epizootic here is disappearing rapidly, and everybody is pleased to see business resumed with accustomed vigor. We of Cicero are interested in the growth of the town of Black Creek, or rather, the village of Middleburgh located in that town. Improvements are quite noticeable. The latest in establishments is a meat market, we think equal to any in the city of Appleton. Mr. Joseph Batley is proprietor.

A few days hence, a party of hunters with Herman Eberhart, one of Cicero's most energetic of settlers, killed a young buck that weighed over 100 pounds — being the largest fawn ever killed in these parts. Deer are rather scarce in these parts as they are being killed or frightened away by the redskins every fall. A part of these Indians is now located about a mile north of our settlement, composed of Menominees and Pottowatomies. To their credit, they are remarkably well behaved.

Tuesday, Dec. 16, 1947.

Mrs. William Bay was re-elected president of the Jolly Eleven Lodge, Loyal Star of America, at Kaukauna. Mrs. William Kaliebe was named vice president; Mrs. Joseph Promer, recording secretary; Mrs. Emil Leick, treasurer; Mrs. Michael Milton, chancellor; Mrs. Henry Scherff, marshal; Mrs. George Allwardt, sentinel; Mrs. Willard Vanden Huevel and Mrs. August Merckx, trustees. Mrs. Henry Verbeten, Little Chute, became the past president.

A. W. Zwerg and Stanley Gillespie were among the several Appleton Lions lending a hand to the Salvation Army in its annual drive to raise funds to provide Christmas dinners to the needy.

10 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, Dec. 18, 1962.

Charles Laughton, giant in the movies as an outstanding actor, died at 63. He had succumbed to cancer the previous Saturday in his Hollywood home. British-born, he and his wife, Elsa Lanchester, became American citizens.

Members of New London Girl Scout Troop 5 presented the play "Candy Canes" for the American Legion Auxiliary under the direction of leader Mrs. Carl Hammerberg. In the cast were Scouts Patsy Peters, Peggy Wienandt, Cheryl Hanson and Edith Spencer.

David Krabbe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Krabbe, Appleton, received the Pro Deo et Patri award, Lutheran religious award for Boy Scouts. A member of Troop 10, Trinity Lutheran Church, the medal was pinned on him by his mother.

Sherwood votes to sign contract for village use of Lehrer landfill

SHERWOOD — Village officials decided late last week to sign a contract with James Lehrer to use the Lehrer landfill at route 3, Kaukauna.

The cost of the contract will be $340 a year, which includes $24 a month to Lehrer and $100 a year to the Town of Buchanan.

Garbage and rubbish may be hauled to the landfill daily from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and on Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

A and F Disposal Service, Appleton, will continue to pick up garbage in the village for those contracting privately for the service.

The village previously shared a landfill with the Village of Stockbridge in the Town of Stockbridge. Stockbridge now participates in the Chilton incinerator plan, and garbage is picked up by a Chilton contractor.

The public works committee said a meeting was held with A and F disposal regarding a municipal contract estimated at $4,457 a year, and the firm was asked to send a representative to the meeting to discuss possible participation in the Chilton incinerator plan. The firm was not represented. Residents may no longer haul to Stockbridge.

President Clarence Zahringer reported that the citizen committee in charge of trying to get a new hearing by the Public Service Commission regarding the recent rate increase granted Stockbridge-Sherwood Telephone Co., was awaiting approval of the procedure submitted to the commission. If approved, petitions will be circulated for a new hearing.

Mrs. John Reichwald was present to request that county plows do not block sidewalks in front of her property on County Trunk Highway M as she wants to keep the sidewalks clear. She asked that the snow be pushed back further and gave permission to have it piled on her vacant lot. Trustee Julius Schmidt said he would discuss the matter with the highway commission.

The board said sidewalk shoveling should be encouraged and discussed the hazards caused by the lack of it, making pedestrians, particularly those attending services at Sacred Heart Church, to walk on the road.

Clerk Florian Schmidt reported that an informal request had been made by Adrian Mader for a zoning change from residential to commercial for the former Joseph Schmidt property that he recently purchased. Mader is requesting that a portion of the home be used for an office for adjacent Dynamic Island, a service station and the rest for an apartment. The relocation of a commercial sign to the edge of the former Schmidt lot is included in the request.

Officials expressed some dissatisfaction with the removal of the sidewalk by Dynamic Island on Clifton Road and curbing on the state highway without village approval, and ruled that plans should be presented by the firm and Mader at the next meeting in order that adjacent property owners be informed of the situation.

Because of pending changes in Environmental Protection Agency laws regarding grants for the proposed village sewage and water system, several meetings planned for this month have been canceled. The new regulations are eyed as possibly being more favorable to the municipality.

A letter from the Farmers Home Administration regarding the "consensus memorandum" agreements submitted for joint facilities for the village and High Cliff Sanitary District states, "It appears the agreement provides sufficient background information upon which to negotiate an agreement and contract providing for the construction and operation of a sewer system."

When the contract for constructing, operating and maintaining the system is ready, the FHA office would like the opportunity to review it before it is signed by the parties, the letter said. The FHA office is in Stevens Point.

New London Jaycees to burn mortgage on park shelter building

NEW LONDON — A mortgage burning ceremony for the Pfeiffer Park Shelter House is being planned by the local Jaycees.

Funds enabling the club to retire the debt on the building were raised through the recent sale of 600 Gourmet Club tickets.

Persons purchasing the tickets will receive one free meal with the purchase of a meal of equal or greater value at five area supper clubs. Participating clubs are Don's Supper Club of New London, Carl's Supper Club of Readfield, The Crystal Chandelier of Hortonville, Ted's Grandview of Fremont and the Oakwood Inn of Waupaca.

School board delays request for land sale

HILBERT — Because the former Robert Koehler farm, purchased by the school district as a possible building site is leased to a local farmer, the board of education Monday night took no action on selling a strip of land 27 x 375 feet to Sylvester Giesen, Richard Werblow and Phillip Hephner.

The three wanted to buy the property to level off their property and give them larger backyards.

The board, however, voted to give them priority in the event the district does consider disposing of any property in that area. They were asked to contact David Diedrich, who has leased the property for three years to get permission for planting gardens on the strip. The three property owners have been cutting grass and weeds on estimated quarter acre.

In other business, Alfred Fochs, board chairman, and chairman of the teacher negotiation team explained that Robert McCormick of the Wisconsin Employee Relations Commission (WERC), had met with both groups as a mediator. He said no definite progress was made. Fochs said the two groups no longer are negotiating one item at a time, but the complete package, and added that the board wants a two-year contract.

The board reviewed the resolutions to be voted up on at the Wisconsin Association of School Boards Convention Jan. 17 in Milwaukee in order that delegate Mrs. Marion Mirsberger can be informed of the board's intentions.

Scouts ready for Klondike Derby event

SHERWOOD — The annual Klondike Derby for the Fox Valley Boy Scout Council will be conducted at the upper level of High Cliff State Park from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Jan. 20.

The days of the Alaskan Gold Rush will come alive as Scouts race their Klondike sleds. The sleds are about 6 feet long and 18 inches wide and carry about 50 pounds of required equipment. Prizes will be offered for the best constructed, best decorated and most authentic sleds.

Starts along the trail will be in 10 minute intervals. An added attraction this year will be a snowshoe race and cross-country ski race.

Scouts will use the east entrance of the park located at the intersection of 55-114 at the "Y." Only Derby staff snowmobiles will be allowed in the area. Visitors are welcome to watch the activities.

Election rules are reviewed

HILBERT — Changes in the law for electing school board members were discussed by the board of education Monday night. The new law provides for their election in the spring instead of at the annual meeting in July.

Notice of the election, giving time, place and manner of filing declaration of candidacy will be given by the district clerk, Richard Werblow, no later than Jan. 9. Candidates will have until 5 p.m. Jan. 23 to file papers.

Those whose terms are expiring are James Meyers, Marion Mirsberger and Charles Gehl.

Appleton Fire Fighters join battle against Md

The Appleton Fire Fighters have formed a committee to aid in the battle against muscular dystrophy. They will begin their battle on behalf of Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, Inc., by placing coin collectors in the area business places on their off-duty hours.

Similar campaigns are underway in the Neenah, Menasha, Kimberly, Kaukauna and Little Chute areas. Distribution in these areas is also being undertaken by firemen.

The money raised by these campaigns will be used to support the association's programs of research and patient service.

William Radtke dies at 75 at Weyauwega

WEYAUWEGA — William O. Radtke, 75, a former member of the Weyauwega Village Board, died Sunday evening at New London Community Hospital after a brief illness.

Radtke had lived in Weyauwega his entire life, having been employed at the Rye Mill, the Wolf River Oil Co, Fremont, and at Radtke's Recreation in Weyauwega, where he worked for his son.

Radtke who served on the Village Board from 1934-38, also had been the treasurer of St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church.

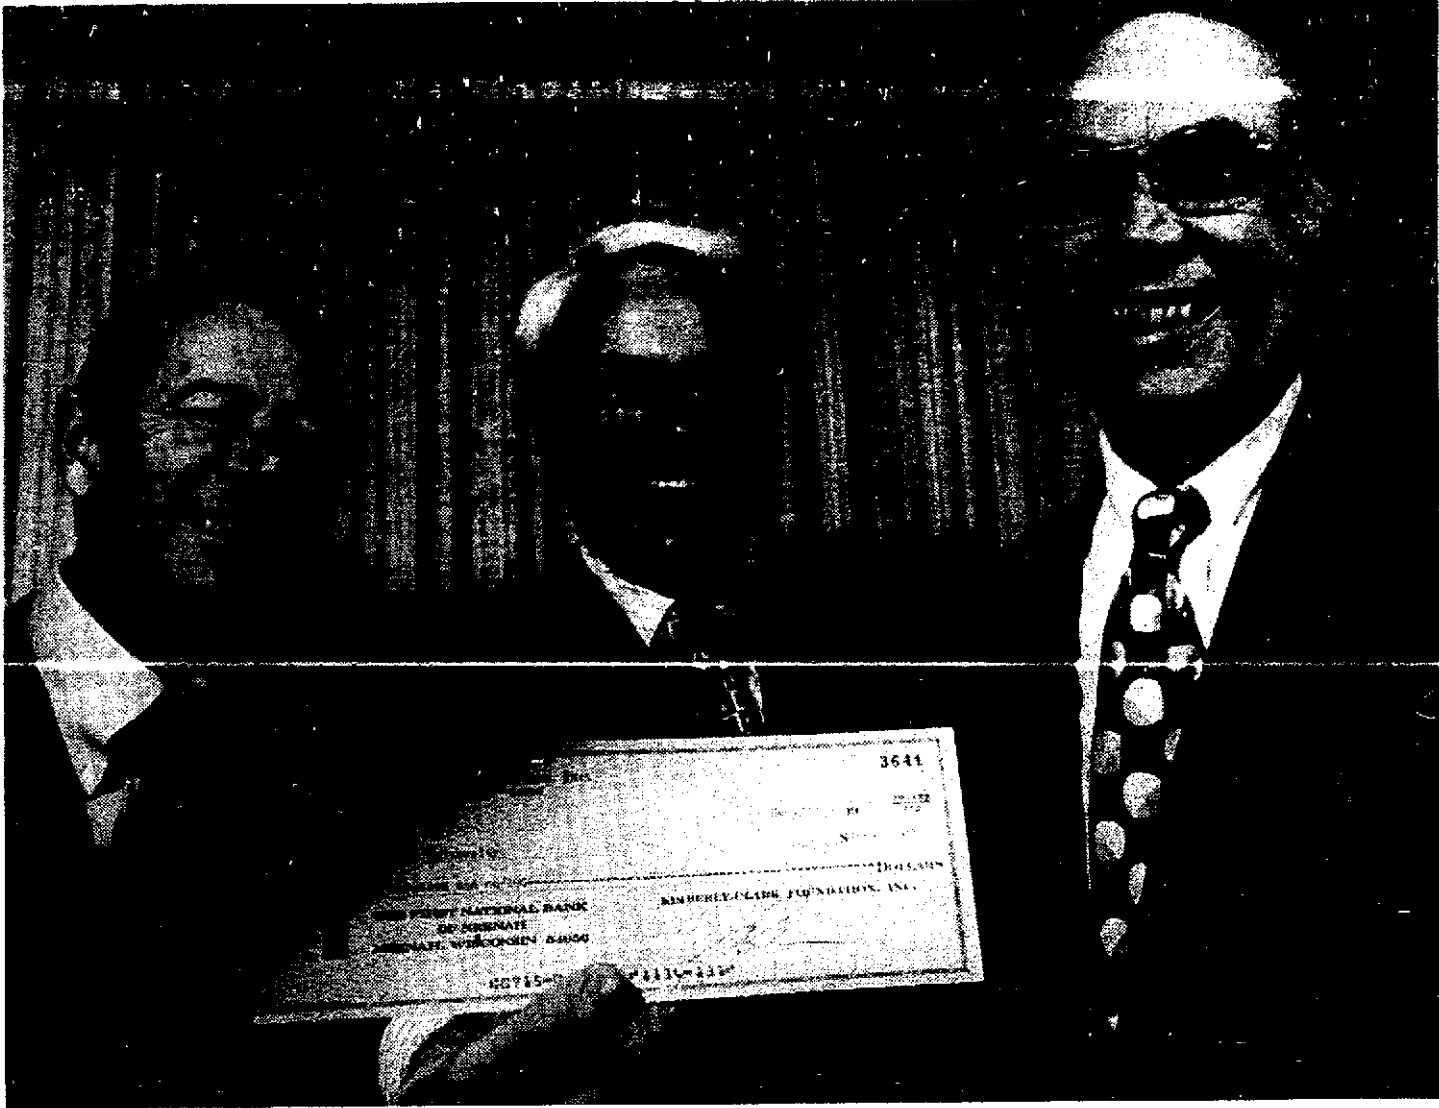

Survivors include his widow, one son, a brother, a sister, three grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at St. Peter, with the Rev. J. C. Dalke officiating.

Burial will be in Oak Wood Cemetery, Weyauwega.

Friends may call at the Cline, Hanson and Dalke Funeral Home, Weyauwega, after 3 p.m. today and until 11:30 Wednesday, and then at the church from noon until 2 p.m.

A memorial has been established for St. Peter Church.

A happy moment

Courts

A 12-member jury trial was scheduled for Jan. 9 for a 21-year-old Menasha man, charged with taking part in the March 8 armed robbery of an Appleton service station.

Richard G. Webb, 480 Nicolet Blvd., Menasha, entered a not guilty plea Monday when he appeared before Circuit Court Judge Gordon Myse. Webb appeared earlier in the day before Judge Urban P. Van Susteren in Outagamie County Court Branch 1, where the case was bound over to Circuit Court following a preliminary hearing.

The defendant is charged with the armed robbery of the Clark Station, 134 N. Richmond St., in which $309 was reportedly taken at gunpoint from the two attendants.

Myse ordered that Webb be released on a $5,000 signature bond.

Yule party scheduled for Greenville children

GREENVILLE — The Greenville Civic Club Inc. will have a Christmas party for area children at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Greenville Municipal Building.

The Christmas tree is lighted at the Greenville Municipal Building and the sign is lighted at the Greenville Community park.

Norman Julius was appointed program chairman and Norbert Sigl will take care of the lunch for the next year. Dues will stay the same.

Three new men were named to the planning committee, including Dick Van Lyssel, John Kreutzberg and Ralph Poepeke. The auditing committee includes Robert Peeters, Wynn Dobberstien and Peter Bekkers.

The nominating committee consists of Ronald Bunkelman, Norman Powers, Dick Schroeder and Norbert Sig. They will choose two candidates for directors to be elected at the February meeting.

Courts

WAUPACA — A presentence investigation was ordered Monday for Patrick S. Tody, 19, route 1, Marion, who pleaded no-contest to causing damage to high school and elementary property at Marion and no-contest to contributing to the delinquency of two girls aged 14 and 16.

Tody, who appeared on Dec. 16 before Court Commissioner George Whalen, was charged with the Oct. 25 damaging of the Marion schools lawns, contributing, and a third offense, purchasing malt beverage for minors.

When he appeared before Judge Nathan Wiese, County Court Branch 2, Monday, the third charge was dismissed.

Tody will be sentenced at 9 a.m. Friday.

Cable TV to begin serving first customers

Appleton's cable television (CATV) system should be ready to serve its first customers soon after Jan. 1, a spokesman for Fox Cities Communications has told city officials.

Franklin Nehs, secretary of the firm holding the city's CATV franchise, said the entire system of cable is expected to be installed by the end of next July, with the segment south of the Fox River completed before the end of this month.

Nehs announced the following steps already completed toward providing an operating CATV system:

- The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has granted the firm a certificate of compliance with FCC rules, which is required before the system is allowed to import television signals and distribute them to subscribers.
- The company has bought and is occupying headquarters at 1620 S. Lawe St.
- The main signal-reception tower has been built in the Town of Harrison southeast of the city, and the "head-end" building, housing electronic gear to handle signals received at the tower, is built.
- Work is nearing completion on installing approximately 50 miles of cable, strung from telephone and electric power poles, on the city's south side.

According to Nehs, the south side represents about one-third of the total length of cable that will be necessary to serve the entire city. The cable is installed in two steps. First, "strand" wire is strung between the poles, to support the message-carrying cable, then the cable is suspended from the strand.

Installation of strand wire will begin in the one-third of the city immediately north of the river in January, Nehs reported.

Individual offices and households are attached to the cable by means of a service line, just as phone and electric service is provided.

The customer's television receiver is hooked up the same way an antenna is connected to the set.

Nehs said initial operations will provide "at least" Channels 2, 5, 11 and 38, Green Bay, and in addition channels carrying weather, news and stock market reports and FM background music.

Microwave facilities still are being built to bring in independent stations, Channel 18, Milwaukee, and Channel 9, Chicago, Nehs said.

The company also must still install studio facilities in its headquarters building, to provide local-origination programming. Nehs said studio construction will begin after the rest of the system is completed.

Weathermen record typical November

The month was cool and cloudy, much like the November most Wisconsiners are accustomed to.

Precipitation, including melted snow and rain, was 1.32 inches, .82 inches below the average; and the mean temperature was 34.5 degrees compared to the normal of 34.8 degrees.

The coldest temperature was 16 degrees recorded Nov. 28 and 29, while the warmest was 53 degrees recorded on Nov. 6.

Heating degree days in Appleton totaled 908 during the month, compared to a normal of 910 and the 1971 total for the month of 868.

The wind prevailed from the southwest at an average speed of 6.8 m.p.h., and there were 19 cloudy, one clear, and 10 partly cloudy days during the month.

December normals for Appleton include a mean temperature of 22.9 degrees and 1.39 inches of precipitation, including 8.3 inches of snow.

The mean temperature normally decreases from 26 degrees at the beginning of the month to 20 degrees at the end. Temperature extremes have been 59 degrees and minus 19 degrees.

Daily hours of daylight decrease from 10 hours, four minutes at the beginning of December to nine hours 48 minutes on Dec. 21 and then will increase to nine hours 57 minutes at the end of the month.

The U.S. Weather Bureau has forecasted below normal temperatures and precipitation.

Mass in rectory is a 'blessing' for elderly

CHILTON — Mass on the first Friday of the month has special meaning for the elderly and handicapped at St. Mary Church.

The Rev. James Vennix offers Mass in the rectory on each first Friday for persons in his parish who find it hard to climb the long steps into the church.

When Vennix came to Chilton a little over two years ago, he noted how many shut-ins were on his communion list for first Friday. After visiting them, he found that some of them could come to Mass and would if they did not have to climb the steps.

He started saying Mass in the rectory and his membership grew to about 30 parishioners, depending on the severity of the weather.

The atmosphere is pleasant as they join in singing the hymns led by Ellen Kampfer, a young parishioner. When the Mass is over, it's "coffee klatsching time" and Alice Baier, Vennix's housekeeper, serves hot coffee and homemade cookies.

Persons who find it difficult to get to Mass regularly, due to a handicap, may call Vennix and he will make arrangements for rides.

Four Fox Valley young men have been named by Rep. John W. Byrnes, R-Green Bay, as successful competitors in the first round of testing for military and naval academy appointments for 1973.

They were tested in October in Civil Service examinations throughout the 8th Congressional District. Later this year, the academic boards of both academies will rank the competitors according to the College Board grades, previous academic and extracurricular records, physical and military aptitudes and evaluations made by high school officials.

Successful military academy competitors are Kevin T. Meighan, son of Dr.

and Mrs. Pearse Meighan, 1107 E. Moorpark, and Steve K. Wieckert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Wieckert, 1704 W. Lorain Court, both Appleton; and Mark J. Morien, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Morien, route 1, New London.

The successful naval academy competitor is Jeff W. Herrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Herrick III, 1402 N. Division St., Appleton.

Failure to arrive at peace saddens Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI says it is sad that negotiations for peace in Vietnam will not produce a ceasefire before Christmas, but he said any agreement must be a just one.

"Without justice, there is no peace," the pontiff said during his blessing Sunday. He said a just peace would exclude hatreds, nationalism, exclusive class systems and the "ideology of prestige."

The Pope said that, despite his anguish that peace has not yet been achieved in Indochina, mankind must not give up hope that it will come eventually.

"Pupils of the cross must hope always for peace," he said.

Beef, pork bought for school use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of school children, after months of being fed turkey hash and stewed chicken, soon will be getting government-donated ground beef and pork for lunch.

The Agriculture Department, which handles the national school lunch program, plans to buy ground beef and pork for distribution to schools about Feb. 1 for the first time in a year.

But cattle and hog prices have set record marks this year, and USDA will have to pay more for hamburger and pork the same as any family shopper. The big difference, however, is that USDA buys in railroad car quantities and gets the meat wholesale.

The department is authorized to buy farm products for donation to schools and needy families as "surplus removals" to help buoy market prices paid to farmers.

"The decision to buy beef and pork was based primarily on making a highly nutritious food available to the schools," Herbert D. Rorex, director of child nutrition for the Food and Nutrition Service in USDA, told a reporter. "To my knowledge there was no pressure from livestock producers to do so."

Thus, Rorex said, the beef and pork purchases will be specifically to make the meat available in school lunches and not as a farm-price booster.

The last time USDA bought ground beef for schools was Jan. 6 this year. In all some 41.7 million pounds were purchased for nearly $23 million. When those purchases began the meat cost about 53 cents per pound, depending on location, and rose to about 58 cents.

By comparison, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, retail prices for hamburger nationally averaged more than 75 cents per pound last month, up more than five cents in a year.

Air Force sex discrimination suit dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today rejected the appeal of a woman officer who charged the Air Force with sex discrimination for its policy of discharging new mothers.

The action, reversing a previous order to hear the appeal of Capt. Susan Struck, comes after the Air Force said it was waiving its policy of discharging women who give birth.

After Capt. Struck, a 28-year-old nurse, had won a hearing, the Air Force announced she would be given a waiver and allowed to remain on active duty. At the same time, the U.S. Solicitor General, Erwin N. Griswold, filed a motion with the court saying the case was now moot and the appeal should be thrown out.

By an 8-1 vote, the court dropped the appeal and sent the case to the U.S. Circuit Court in San Francisco to consider the issue of mootness. Justice Potter Stewart, alone, dissented. He said the high court should have gone ahead with its hearing and decided later whether the issues was a dead one.

Radio Havana reports Castro is in Russia

MIAMI (AP) — Prime Minister Fidel Castro headed a delegation of Cuban officials who have flown to the Soviet Union to participate in ceremonies commemorating the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Castro's departure Monday was announced over Havana radio in a broadcast monitored in Miami.

Chapel not required at academies

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — "very many" Midshipmen will continue to attend church on their own despite a U.S. Supreme Court ruling banning mandatory chapel attendance at the nation's service academies, the senior chaplain at the Naval Academy believes.

"From what I have seen since I have been here, I have been impressed by the general spirit of the Brigade of Midshipmen with respect to chapel attendance," said Capt. John J. O'Connor, the school's top chaplain for the past five months. "And I am personally convinced that a very large number of Midshipmen will voluntarily worship at the academy chapel or at a church in town."

The Supreme Court Monday ruled that students at the Naval Academy, the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., and the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., could not be required to attend chapel, thus overturning a longstanding service academy regulation.

Heretofore, Midshipmen have been required either to attend Sunday church service at the academy chapel or at a church in Annapolis, or attend a "moral and ethics discussion group" conducted by two naval officers who teach at the academy. The groups cover such topics as the history of religion and comparative religion.

Indian schools might again receive money

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Indian schools in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Milwaukee, Wis., apparently will have an opportunity to recover federal funds currently tied up in a dispute about how the money was spent.

The Upper Midwest American Indian Center withdrew Saturday as the "grantee" of Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) funds to the schools.

However, an OEO spokesman in Washington, D.C., said Monday that a new channel for funneling money to the schools may be found. But no such channel would be considered, he added, until an audit is conducted of grant money spent by the schools to date.

Federal investigators have said they believe some of the school funds had been used by American Indian Movement (AIM) members who participated in the November takeover of Bureau of Indian Affairs offices in Washington.

AIM members have denied the charge.

A hearing on the matter has been set for Dec. 29 in Minneapolis. The hearing has been postponed twice previously.

The OEO had granted $20,000 to the Minneapolis Indian School, the Red School House in St. Paul and the Milwaukee Community School. Another $53,000 of OEO money was earmarked for the Milwaukee Community Center.

Upper Midwest cited the refusal of school officials to provide financial information as the reason for withdrawing from the program. School officials said the center did not properly inform the school of what information was necessary.

The Indian schools were established to instruct Indian youngsters in their culture and to lower the school dropout rate among Indians.

Building power plants near cities advised to keep clean air clean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rather than dirty up the clear skies of the Southwest, the Interior Department today suggested that power plants using the region's coal should be built near the cities needing more electricity.

A new report said that carrying coal from remote areas of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Nevada to population centers elsewhere in the country would cost about the same as building generating plants in the Southwest.

There is pending before a federal appeals court in Washington a case which could make the suggestion mandatory policy.

Environmentalists are pressing the government to interpret federal clean air laws as prohibiting states from allowing the air to become any dirtier even in areas like the Southwest where the air quality is better than minimum federal pollution standards. Long-standing plans for the southwestern plants were cited in the court case.

But no matter where the power plants are built, the report concluded, the central problem is finding better air pollution equipment to reduce their smoke.

The Interior Department study, a year in preparation, was also done under pressure from environmentalists who said it was required as an environmental impact statement because the proposed power plants would use some federal lands.

It indicated that a variety of environmental harm would come from continued power plant construction in the Southwest, particularly the Colorado River basin, not only from smoke emissions but also from the strip mining of the coal and the scenic view ruined by the plants and their network of power lines.

The report said, however, that there seemed to be no practical alternative to the construction of coal-fired plants if the projected power needs of the next 20 years are to be met.

However, the report acknowledged that "alternatives to reduce the waste of energy, particularly electric energy, by the ultimate consumer have not been explored to any appreciable extent and appear to offer significant possibilities."

The present plan calls for construction of more than 30,000 megawatts of coal-burning generating capacity in the region, but even that would provide only about 28 per cent of the expected demands by 1980.

What do doctors recommend for patients in pain?

Doctors all over the country dispense over 50,000,000 of these tablets to their patients each year.

There are many medications a physician or dentist can prescribe for pain. Some are narcotic, many are available only on prescription. But there is one pain reliever, available without prescription, doctors dispense again and again... Anacin.

Each year, doctors give over 50,000,000 Anacin tablets to their patients in pain. If doctors think enough about Anacin to dispense all these tablets, what better recommendation can you ask when you are in pain?

You see, Anacin contains none of the pain reliever doctors recommend more than any other leading tablet.

Headache and dental pain is relieved incredibly fast; minor pains of arthritis are dependably eased for hours; even the aches and pains of colds and flu respond to Anacin. So the tension and depression that can be caused by such pain will be relieved too. And millions take Anacin without stomach upset.

When you're in pain, why don't you follow the practice of so many doctors and take the tablet a doctor might give you in his own office. Take Anacin® against a Saigon regime, it would have considerable wallop not only because of the well equipped Northern troops, but from the fact that the front now is a political entity ready to share in South Vietnam's rule.

War has done little to change Vietnam

In 1954 an International Control Commission was set up to supervise the cease-fire. It had Communist, non-Communist and neutral members and a built-in veto. In addition, both sides interfered with its activities.

This time, the supervision machinery would be evenly divided between Communist and non-Communist representatives. The machinery is just as unlikely to be able to enforce cease-fire terms, especially should a situation of guerrilla war and furtive attrition arise again.

In the 1950s and 1960s, as the Americans gradually became more deeply involved, Washington's advertised goal was to insure the sovereignty, independence and territorial integrity of South Vietnam.

The United States now apparently agrees to the continued presence in South Vietnam of regular Northern forces — 145,000 by U.S. estimate and 300,000 by Saigon's. Saigon complains that this scarcely squares with notions of sovereignty.

Nonexistent forces

In the 1950s before the French learned their bitter lesson, they scoffed at the Vietminh as "nonexistent phantoms." Since 1968 and the peace talks in Paris, Hanoi has insisted that Northern forces in the South were nonexistent. Hanoi long resisted pressure to admit its soldiers were in the South at all, though it kept saying they had a right to be there. Now there is a chance those troops will merge with the Viet Cong and lose their Northern identity after all, at least for a while.

The peace talks

The talks started in May 1968 as a two-way U.S.-North Vietnamese affair. They expanded in January 1969 after long, acrimonious wrangling over the shape of the conference table — whether it should have two, three or four sides. The upshot, with an assist from the Russians, was agreement on a round table. This satisfied the American contention that the Viet Cong and its front could not be considered a political entity, and Hanoi's stand that the Saigon regime was just a puppet. In the settlement, Hanoi now suggests that the Saigon regime is an entity, after all, and the United States concedes that so is the front, round table to the contrary notwithstanding.

When the talks at last became real negotiations, there were in reality only two sides. The Saigon regime and its front rivals, supposedly the main antagonists all along, obviously were just junior partners, obliged in the long run to accept what their patrons had worked out.

China Soviet role

The United States, shocked by Korea, began in 1950 to extend military aid to the French colonial power in Indochina, reasoning that a world Communist monolith threatened to gobble all Southeast Asia. But 22 years later, the roles of China and Russia in world affairs helped open the way for a solution.

A long feud between Peking and Moscow evaporated the specter of a world monolith. A man who had been prominent two decades before in warning of a Communist menace was now, as president of the United States, making dramatic approaches to China and Russia. The change this produced in the world climate probably helped per-suaide Hanoi to talk business

The United States poured wealth and power in incalculable amounts into destruction in Indochina. It is now prepared to regard the area, friend and enemy together, as a whole and pour new wealth into repairing what was destroyed.
